GENERAL CHEN CHAI-TANG REPORTED TO HAVE LEFT CANTON BUT DESTINATION UNKNOWN

WHOLESALE DEFECTIONS CAUSE RETIREMENT REASONS FOR DOWNFALL OF SOUTH-WEST REGIME

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.

The loyal second army, commanded by General Chang Tai, has turned against General Chen Chi-tang, military ruler of Kwangtung for the past seven years, who is reported to have left here to-day aboard a river gunboat for Hong Kong.

General Chen intended to leave yesterday, and the defection of the second army precipitated his departure.

General Yu Hon-mou, the Pacification Commissioner of Kwangtung, demanded that General Chen should leave Canton before noon to-morrow. Chen is unable to do otherwise owing to the departure of the air force and the defection of his loyal supporters.

Having deserted the sinking political ship, Mr. Lam Wan-koy, Chairman of the Kwangtung Provincial Government, and Mayor Liu Chi-wen are now holidaying in Hong Kong in the hope that they will be still acceptable to Nanking. Mayor Liu's political future is very uncertain, and hundreds of municipal school teachers are still clamouring to him for three-months' salaries in arrears.

The downfall of the South-west regime is due to the fact that its so-called anti-Japanese activities are but a smoke-screen. Former generals of the 19th Route Army are asked to join the Canton movement, but they decline on the ground that there is no concrete anti-Japanese platform. These former generals do not wish to back a losing horse.

Nanking reports insist that the alleged anti-Japanese movement here is really aimed at the collapse of the Chiang Kai-shek regime in Nanking. Such agitations here will cease as from to-morrow.

REPORT UNCONFIRMED

The local Naval authorities were unable to confirm a later message from Canton to the effect that General Chen Chai-tang had made a hurried departure from Canton yesterday afternoon by the Chinese warship Hai Hu, which was alleged to have left for an unknown destination.

GENERAL LI LEAVES BY PLANE FOR NANNING

Canton, Inter: General Chen Chai-tang left Canton this afternoon by the warship Hai Hu for an unknown destination.

Before his departure from Canton, General Chen sent a telegram to General Yu Han-mow, stating that he was retiring and that he was leaving all affairs in charge of his subordinates. The telegram was very much to the point and lacked detail.

General Li Chung-jen is reported to have left for Nanning by plane.

General Chen has left affairs in the hands of General Li Yung-kiung, who will be in charge of Canton pending the arrival, in that city, of General Yu Han-mow. — Our Own Correspondent.

CANTON PLANE'S FORCED LANDING ON GOLF COURSE

Surprise For Fanling Residents

MACHINE CONVEYED TO KAI TAK

In addition to the four planes which landed at Kai Tak civil aerodrome yesterday morning, a full report of which will be found on Page 12, a fifth, a Fleet Trainer, made a forced landing on the Fanling golf course at 7 a.m. yesterday, one of the wings being slightly damaged. The machine was eventually removed from Fanling and conveyed by lorry last night to the civil hangar at Kai Tak.

Of the four planes which are now being detained at Kai Tak, one is a German type Focke-Wulf training machine, of which delivery was only taken last February, while the biggest is of American make, mounted with a Wright Whirlwind engine. The other two aeroplanes are much smaller and are mounted with Kinner engines. All are painted a light green, with the National emblem on the carriage.

GERMAN PLANE AT KAI TAK 12 DAYS ON TRIP FROM BERLIN FLYING ON TO SHANGHAI

The Kai Tak civil aerodrome played host to another giant German aeroplane yesterday, when the Lufthansa Junker 52, named the D-AGEI, arrived at approximately 5.30 p.m. en route to Shanghai from Berlin. The machine, which is the fifth ordered from the Lufthansa Company by the Eurasia Aviation Corporation, Shanghai, is a sister-ship to the machine which landed at Kai Tak last December.

Including a delay of a week at Athens, the aeroplane has so far taken just over 12 days from Berlin. There was only one unfortunate accident on the trip, which occurred on the Italian island of Rhodes in the Mediterranean, following the first day's flight.

The machine, which is an 18-passenger air-liner, is under the command of Captain Lutz, the chief pilot, while the rest of the complement consists of Second Pilot Laidig and Chief Engineer Jude.

They left Berlin on Monday, July 6, and, flying via Belgrade, reached Rhodes, an Italian island in the Mediterranean. At the latter island, while the machine was being refuelled, their Chief Mechanic Stichnothe fell from the nose of the machine and sustained a serious fracture of the left shin-bone, which necessitated immediate hospital care.

FLOWN TO ATHENS

As there was only an Italian military doctor at Rhodes, the injured man was put on to an army stretcher, lifted into the aeroplane and taken to Athens, where he was immediately operated on in hospital. In the meantime the machine had to fly back to the island of Rhodes to return the injured man. Returning to Athens, Capt. Lutz wired Berlin for a new mechanic, but, owing to frontier difficulties, vizas, etc., the new mechanic did not arrive until a week later.

They continued their journey Chinwards last Monday, flying via Aleppo and Baghdad to Bushire and from there to Karachi, the Royal Air Force Command in the Near East, where they again refuelled. The latter part of the journey was accomplished on their actual second day of flying. On the third day they left Karachi for Calcutta via Jodhpur and Allahabad, and on the fourth day completed their journey to Bangkok via Rangoon.

CATTLE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Many Animals Killed Instantaneously

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Sofia, Yesterday. During a thunderstorm last night near the little town of Karlowe in South Bulgaria lightning struck a herd of cattle in which were 240 sheep. Most of the animals were killed instantaneously, while the rest perished in the flames when nearby outhouses caught fire. Three farmhands asleep in a stable were seriously injured. — Trans-Ocean Service.

effort to locate the last member of the party, but was unsuccessful. The difficult conditions in which the rescue was made are evidenced by the fact that a sampan, launched by a party of would-be rescuers, who were also at the beach, capsized before they could render any assistance.

TRAGEDY AT SHEK-O STUDENT FROM RICCI HALL DROWNED

Europeans Rescue Five Of Party Of Six

STRONG UNDERTOW CAUSES FATALITY

Shek-O beach, one of the most dangerous in the Colony during rough weather, was the scene of a most regrettable drowning tragedy yesterday afternoon in which Lucien Pjon, aged 22 years, a student of the University (Ricci Hall) lost his life.

According to a police report, it appears that Pjon, together with two fellow students, G. H. Gou, aged 22 years, and Oey Jauw Hong, aged 19 years, were bathing quite close to the shore together with the Misses V. Kitty and Rose Ma, there being a heavy surf and a very strong undertow at the time. Not long after they entered the water the party were caught in the undertow and carried out to the sea, about 70 yards from the shore, and their cries for help attracted the attention of three Europeans, believed to be soldiers stationed at Lyemun, who went at once to their aid.

FIVE RESCUED

Mr. Phillip Gillespie and S.Q. M.S. Street of the Royal Army Service Corps, who were also bathing at the time, had their attention drawn by the continued cries of "Help!" and went to the assistance of the three Europeans, who were already doing rescue work, their combined efforts resulting in five of the party being brought safely to the shore. They were all in an exhausted state and artificial respiration had to be administered to one of them.

One member of the party in difficulty was still some distance from the shore, and threw up his hands and disappeared just before Mr. Street, who very recently left hospital following an illness, was able to reach him. Mr. Street himself was by this time considerably weakened by his exertions, and Mr. Gillespie insisted on his returning to safety. Mr. Gillespie then dived several times, in an

MILITARY REVOLT IN SPANISH MOROCCO ALL COMMUNICATIONS CUT OFF

Madrid, Yesterday. — After several hours' silence the Spanish Government admitted that there was a military rising in Melilla, Morocco. Martial law has been declared in Melilla and the Foreign Legion has occupied the town.

The Minister of Communications says that Colonel Elitella, of the Melilla garrison, revolted with all the troops under his command. The General Officer Commanding at Melilla surrendered.

MORE TROOPS IN PALESTINE

Strength Now At 10 Battalions

Jerusalem, Yesterday. A battalion of South Wales Borderers has arrived at Haifa from Malta, bringing the total military forces in Palestine to 10 battalions. A Jewish labourer was killed by an Arab ambush just outside the city, Reuter's Bulletin Service.

BRITISH NAVAL EXERCISES

To Be Witnessed By King Farouk

Cairo, Yesterday. ## DAVIS CUP ALL SQUARE AT WIMBLEDON

Quist Fully Extends Von Cramm

HENKEL RETIRES WHEN TWO SETS DOWN

London, Yesterday.

A huge crowd was disappointed this afternoon at Wimbledon when Heinrich Henkel, Germany's second string player, defaulted when two sets down to Jack Crawford in the opening match of the Inter-Zone Final of the Davis Cup, thus giving Australia a surprisingly easy lead.

After Crawford had won the first two sets at 6-2, 6-2, Henkel, who has been indisposed recently, suffering from a bad cold, retired.

In the second singles match Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Wimbledon finalist for two years in succession, raised German hopes by beating Adrian Quist, the youthful Australian champion, by 4-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 11-9 to place the two countries on level terms. — Reuter.

On Monday Crawford and Quist are expected to give Austria a 2-1 lead, which Quist should consolidate on Tuesday with a win over Henkel or any other German player who may be substituted.

SENSATIONAL ECLIPSE Australia, beating New Zealand in the First Round and France in the Second Round, qualified to meet Germany last year in the Third Round of the Davis Cup, after the latter had defeated Italy in the Second Round, having drawn a bye in the First.

CHINESE PROTEST TO TOKYO

Sequel To Arrest Of Mr. Sung

ALLEGED MILITARY ESPIONAGE

Nanking, Yesterday.

The Foreign Ministry has instructed the Chinese Ambassador at Tokyo to protest against the arrest of Mr. Sung Ping-chien and other officials of the Chinese Consulate at Seishin, Korea, and to demand their immediate release. The Chinese Consul-General at Seoul has been instructed to make similar representations to the Governor-General of Korea.

It is contended that even if Mr. Sung and his colleagues were suspected of military espionage they should have been turned over to the Chinese Government. — Reuter.

A message from Seoul received on Thursday stated that the Japanese Garrison headquarters announced in a communique that "the self-appointed Chinese Consul at Seishin, Mr. Sung Ping-yu, and his followers were arrested this morning and charged with engaging in military espionage."

Talking Of Ghosts

By TARELLA DASKEIN

"TALKING of ghosts—" said Marigold, in the inconsequent way she had of springing from the subject in hand to the most remote conversational stepping-stone, and clasping her brown hands about her hunched-up knees.

"But we weren't," objected John. "No, but we're going to—" John allowed his hands to drop on the keys of the grand piano, and beneath them rose a moan and rumble that might have been an echo of the Pacific coming in on a calm day at Manly, a restless dragging surge.

Then he smiled and faced her. "Why don't you compose something great?" asked she, making her next spring to a far-off stepping-stone; "you could, you know."

"I wonder—" "Of course you could—not jazz and not that footling stuff—you know—Ruby lips and eyes of blue that will ever smile for you!"

"No good," said John. "I just get so far and no farther. You write the words and I'll do the music, and I promise you we'll knock 'em! But—" his hands trailed over the black and white notes, evoking a melody of something reminiscent of something else—something better than his own. That was his trouble.

"Your bits remind me of other people's works," said Marigold tactlessly; and he answered, "I wonder why I love you," and left it at that.

But she pursued it relentlessly. "You have wonderful hands, John, but they are the hands of a gentleman mechanic—they would be cleverer at picking locks than than—" "Thank you. Do gentlemen pick locks?"

The lights on Sydney Harbour were punctuating the dying light of day, twilight giving way to clusters of stars twinkling. Ripples and streams of light drawn by the swiftly-moving launches moved along the water, and flats and tenements became sparkling turrets that made an unreal hanging fairland of Sydney's heights. The great bridge span its glow-worm beauty over the harbour, and a restless mist that lifted and settled wreathed a trembling, shifting scarf about its eerie water and climbing loveliness.

"Speaking of ghosts," continued Marigold, "do you believe in them?"

"Why—I don't know—not in this land, somehow—don't go and come over all creepy, Marigold, please."

"No, I won't, but listen—" "Yes."

"You're a mimic, you know—quite definitely you are—you can copy anything."

He frowned. "I mean, why not compose a whole big Australian—what would you call it—symphony? Is that the right word? I'm not musical, you know—bringing in the magpies waking up the mountains with their mad music, and the kookaburras chuckling at dusk before rain—and after that, why not the patter and splash of rain on the gumtrees, pit-patter! pit-patter! and the smell!"

"So easy," he murmured, "but let it be an opera at once with a grand finale of a red sandstorm blotting out the stage in which camels fade to shapes that disappear and an old man kangaroo is left stroking his whiskers and soliloquising beyond the falling curtain."

"Now you're becoming foolish," "Well, getting back to ghosts—something sensible—"

Marigold all of a sudden became serious. She became remote and a little mysterious, eager to talk, but fearful.

She looked over her shoulder into the darkening room, and a passing ferry far below played a melody of lights about the room that ran along the piano and the polished woods, making her shiver.

A large mirror in an ornate frame above the mantelpiece reflected the sparkle of the night world outside, twinkling and winking, alternate lights and shadows flitting, reflecting also a bowl of primroses below that were the colour of Marigold's hair.

John gazed at her. "You're like the primroses, Marigold."

"The flowers that die unwee," she replied; "who wrote that—and why?"

"But you shall not die unwee. Wait till I make my fortune with my opera! But tell me about your ghosts."

He twisted about on the piano-stool and faced her in the dying light.

"One lives here," she answered simply; "I mean—a ghost."

"Here! Lives!" "Yes, I've often seen him."

"But there are no ghosts in Australia."

"Why not? Their spirits must go somewhere, poor dears."

"Tell me," said John. "Years ago," began Marigold, "a little man lived, here in this old house—a Belgian. He was a composer—a real composer."

"We'll let that pass for the moment," said John indulgently; "I should like to hear more."

"His name was Andre Nopenaire."

"GLOOMY SUNDAY"

WRITTEN BY A HUNGARIAN HAS NOW REACHED HONG KONG IN RECORD FORM. SOME LOCAL BUSINESS MEN THINK THE COMPOSER WAS PROBABLY A PIECE-GOODS MAN, ANYWAY HE CERTAINLY DIDN'T SEEM TO HAVE MUCH TO SMILE ABOUT.

ANOTHER IDEA IS THAT IT WOULD MAKE A GOOD SIGNATURE TUNE FOR THE EASTERN BASEBALL TEAM, THEY GENERALLY PLAY ON SUNDAY AND HAVEN'T WON A MATCH YET.

A Z.B.W. FAN DIDN'T THINK THE TITLE VERY ORIGINAL BECAUSE WEVE HAD 'EM FOR MONTHS.

A LOCAL MERCHANT THOUGHT THE TITLE A GOOD ONE FOR HONG KONG, BUT WHY ONLY MENTION SUNDAY?

ONE OF OUR CIVIL SERVANTS SAID IT MADE HIM RATHER SAD HIS SUNDAY WAS THE ONLY DAY HE COULDN'T BE AT THE OFFICE.

ONE RESIDENT WHO OWNS A LOT OF LOCAL SHARES THOUGHT WE OUGHT TO HAVE A SONG OF THE SCRIPT. THIS OF COURSE WOULD BE WRITTEN IN THE SAME ROUSING STRAIN AS THE DEAD MARCH. STAN HILL 1936

She rose and pointed to a faded patch on the old rug—a patch worn by two feet.

There was silence. "And you can see him in the mirror—in the mirror, when he comes—can see him nodding—and the bald patch"—she shuddered violently, "oh—oh—I'm so frightened when I talk about him—but never when I see him. I always forget he is a ghost until he's gone. They say that is the way of ghosts."

"You've frightened me," said John quite honestly, "because you've made me believe you. I'm not spooky as a rule, but I believe you."

"And I found something the other day," continued Marigold reluctantly, as though something were being torn from her, knotting her fingers together, "something interesting."

"Yes—yes."

"It was in the linen press under the paper that lined the shelves—the top shelf."

"Yes."

"Evidently had been there for years—quite yellow—all faded—"

"Well?"

"It was called 'Cendres d'or,' a composition—unfinished—perhaps the last thing he ever wrote—"

"Get it."

"No, no, he will come."

"No, no, John, don't make me."

John leant forward and took her trembling hands in his.

"Get it, Marigold," he said quite quietly.

She was as though hypnotised—she rose, looking back at him as she left the room, and when she returned, a faded, yellowed manuscript was in her hand, at the top of which was written, "Cendres d'or" in a sloping foreign hand.

"Don't, John," she pleaded. "Why not? Let me see it."

He took it from her shaking hand and placed it on the piano rack and began to play uncertainly. He played it through again more certainly—and then again.

She watched him, curiously fascinated. He was a magnificent specimen of a young man, brown and healthy, clean-limbed, and in her eyes quite wonderful.

She listened to him playing that delicate and delicious air that has since become famous, with strong, sure hands that might have felled forests or picked locks. She heard him play the air as far as it went, and then finish that wonderful melody himself, soft, sluttily "Cendres d'or" that fell to no place beneath his fingers, and she realised that John was really a musician.

"Cendres d'or" was finished and creditably finished, musically finished.

The light was fading fast, and the bridge was a magic web across the harbour, and the pale primroses were paler than Marigold's hair.

"He stands on the hearthrug—just as he."

"You've finished it, John," she uttered breathlessly. "How wonderful—but what—desecration—almost."

She saw him scribbling down small, crooked notes between his playing.

"What are you going to—"

And then it came.

She saw her little ghost—her dear little ghost standing on his faded patch of carpet beneath the mirror, his bald patch mirrored faintly in the glass above.

He was nodding—beating time—smiling.

He seemed to be saying, "Splendid! I couldn't have done it better myself—that is how I would have finished it if I hadn't—if I hadn't—died."

She watched him with wide blue eyes—her dear little ghost.

And then she saw that John had left the piano and was writing rapidly at a table finishing the broken melody of "Cendres d'or."

"John!" she breathed.

"Be quiet!" he commanded.

"But, John—"

"I'm going to finish it."

"Yes—but as the posthumous work of Andre Nopenaire—of course."

"No," he replied vehemently, "as my own. No one will be any the wiser, and it's my chance, I tell you. It will make me. We shall be able to marry—"

She watched his beautiful brown hands.

"Picking locks!" she thought, and flushed at her delirality.

It was completed—the finished score of "Cendres d'or," and instinctively she looked towards the fireplace.

Lights were now fitting across the harbour like fireflies darting, and the hills around were mounds of light piled.

Outside the wide window the leaves of the Moreton Bay fig trees clashed restlessly, while its tangled old rubber roots writhed round the foundation of the house, burrowing. A faint light shivered and shivered luminously in the mirror.

"It's finished," murmured John. Marigold stared at him fearfully, and then, grasping the edge of the table, she rose, looking straight into her lover's eyes.

He was looking upwards towards the fireplace, through her, without seeing her. He was ready to sign. And, looking into his widely distended eyes, she saw a picture that filled her with horror beyond imagining.

She saw a twin picture in each eye—a picture of a small foreign-looking man with a pointed beard crossing the room from the fireplace. He had forsaken his small faded patch of carpet and was advancing behind her. But there was hate in his eyes. As he neared the table he stretched out his arm above Marigold's head, and there came a faint sound of scarping, as though something had cries near the fire, and a white streak appeared in the pale gold of her hair. She saw his lips form a word:

"Sign!" commanded the little ghost, "sign!" She saw it in John's wide eyes.

And then, before the pen fell from the fingers of the man she loved, she saw him sign, "Andre Nopenaire" in a slanting foreign hand, and he, John, was sitting staring rather dazedly and quite bewildered at the signature.

"John!" murmured Marigold, "why?"

"I don't know," he answered; "I think perhaps he made me. I just—just couldn't. Something happened."

He passed his hand over his face as though to wipe away the memory of it. "I saw him coming towards me, and he looked as though he hated me, and I felt I couldn't."

"Of course you couldn't, John, for you know—as you yourself said—gentlemen don't pick locks. It will be published as 'Cendres d'or,' the posthumous work of Andre Nopenaire, finished by John Winterfold. And the little ghost will bring us luck."

He stretched out his hands and clasped the hands of the girl before him then humbly bent his head and kissed her.

The mirror silvered over mistily, darkened, then cleared, and there was a small man in evening clothes standing before it, and even in the dusk it, might have been seen that he was nodding and smiling. The harbour lights played about him giddily, sparkling fireflies that lit and lost the two young people sitting hand in hand.

And on the carpet, unnoticed, lay a pen beneath the table.

FOUR YEARS WITH ULCERATED STOMACH

Now feels "different altogether"

If you endure the terrible agony of ulcerated stomach—or if you have suffered from the pain of other gastric ills, flatulence, wind, indigestion—you will understand the joy with which Mr. W. H. H. wrote this amazing letter:

"For nearly four years I have suffered from ulcerated stomach. I am a waiter, so you can understand how I have suffered—on the go for 12 to 14 hours each day. Sometimes I could have screamed with pain whilst waiting on the guests. Each year I have had to leave my work as I could not carry on. Not long ago I got a bottle of your Powder and since taking it I feel different altogether."

This is typical of the letters continually being received by Maclean. Sufferers who had given up all hope, whom even operation had failed to cure, tell of the marvellous results they have experienced even from the very first dose of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder.

Follow their example, and be absolutely certain to ask for Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, the one with the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on the bottle. There are inferior substitutes at lower prices, but they are not worth the risk to your health. Get the genuine Maclean Brand. It is never sold loose. Also in tablet form. ## "OUR PARIS LETTER"

BEACH ELEGANCE SPELLS GAIETY:
SUNFLOWERS BRIGHTEN THE BATHING SUIT

It would seem that women are expected to take their sun baths in moderated doses this Summer. The designers have made provision for them to get under cover whenever they like. Coats accompany a big majority of the bathing suits, and beach hats are huge.

Sun-tanning has become an art. No longer does the clever girl expose herself ruthlessly to the ravages of violet rays; she seeks first aid with the application of oils and then lets the tan spread like a golden frosting over a cake. It is obvious as one sees the girls, but recently returned from the Lido, that they have learned this trick and will set a cafe-au-lait rather than a cafe-noir style in tanning for the Summer.

The coats that will help women to take their sun-tanning in homeopathic doses come in all lengths. The beach-length ones will unquestionably be in the majority. They are about the best-looking things one can imagine. Because of cut and fabric they might easily be worn over informal evening dresses — we refer to those in silk alpaca and heavy linen. When the young woman gets dressed for the beach — but does not plan to go near the water — she can throw a full-skirted robe of glazed chintz over her play suit of the same material. The robe is in one colour — say gold — the suit in another, rose, perhaps.

When it comes to the general cut of suits there seems little to be said that was not said last season. There are halter necks and sun-tan backs; skirts are possibly more numerous, and trousers are a little fuller. Such difference as there is, is found in the materials which have exuberance of colour and pattern. Sober monotonies are making way for flower designs. There are rose bespattered challis, taffetas on which appear barnyard animals and the turreted outlines of medieval strongholds; acetates have burst into brilliant bloom. When it comes to cottons one finds everything from polka dots to the latest map design.

FOR THE BEACH AND THE SEA

Here are mermale who know how to look when they go for a romp on the sands. See the hooded cape — it is as appropriate on the beach as it is in the theatre.

STORAGE OF TOYS

In homes where there is no separate playroom for children and where little accommodation can be spared for the storage of toys, some way of coping with the continual silt of playthings has to be considered. One simple plan is to have a large box without a lid, on casters, which can be heaped with toys and rolled easily under the table. Another solution, involving little expense, is practicable where there is a wide, low bay window. A joiner can make a fitted box window seat with hinged lids level with the inner sill. If the seat encroaches only eighteen inches into the room, it does not take up any valuable space and yet seems to have a vast capacity. A few cushions make it into a comfortable seat which is a favourite retreat with young people.

MORE PANTS

As for play togs, the culotte seems to be the thing; that grand divided skirt that comes barely below the knees is the most talked of sports costume of the season. It is for young and old; it can be made in cotton or silk; it can be worn in cabana or club; it comes separately or as a part of an ensemble. Matter-of-fact pyjamas tailored and trim, were also in the running.

LONGER LIFE FOR STOCKINGS

NEW stockings, it is said, are less likely to develop runs when they are rinsed in a solution of iron-free aluminium sulphate that is supposed to give them more elasticity. This compound now is available in powder form. A report of the U.S.A. Bureau of Standards has it that when stockings become coated with an insoluble soap of aluminum sulphate their elasticity (which means wearing qualities and resistance to runs) is increased. After the stockings are washed and wrung out they are soaked in the solution for fifteen minutes. The coating is supposed to stay with the stockings through subsequent washings.

little tricks .

If one desires to blacken a pair of brown shoes, first remove all traces of dust, and then mix half an ounce of ivory black with the juice of a lemon and sufficient vinegar to make a thin liquid. Use a stiff brush, and after giving them a second coat leave for a day or two before polishing in the ordinary way.

When knitting a design that requires a good deal of concentration, take a piece of thin plain cardboard, large enough to cover the page of instructions, and in the centre of the card cut a narrow slot, through which one line of instructions will be readable. The place will be kept, in spite of interruptions, and there will be far less eyestrain.

FOUR CHANGES IN ENGLAND TEST ELEVEN

Wyatt Dropped For Next Saturday

HAMMOND, FISHLOCK, FAGG AND GOVER TO PLAY

London, Yesterday.

The following have been selected to represent England in the Second Test Match against All-India at Manchester next Saturday:—

G. O. Allen (Middlesex) captain.
R. W. V. Robins (Middlesex).
Hammond (Gloucester).
Leyland (Yorkshire).
Verity (Yorkshire).
Fishlock (Surrey).
Hardstaff (Notts).
Duckworth (Lancashire).
Fagg (Kent).
Gimblett (Somerset).
Gover (Surrey).

—Reuter.

Four changes have been made from the team which represented England in the first Test, which they won by nine wickets, the players dropped being Mitchell, James Langridge, R. E. S. Wyatt, the Warwickshire and former England skipper, and M. J. Turnbull, captain of Glamorgan. The newcomers are Hammond, Fishlock, Fagg and Gover.

POPULAR DECISION

The inclusion of Gover, the Surrey fast bowler, will no doubt be well received by the many followers of the game who confidently expected him to be included in the first Test on the strength of his consistently good bowling this season. Fishlock, also of Surrey, is a young left-hander of whom great things are expected, while "Wally" Hammond, the Gloucester star, though badly out of form this season, is too well known to need any introduction. Fagg is playing in his first Test match and has two three-figure innings to his credit this season, namely 136 against Gloucester and 257 against Hampshire.

SMASHING WIN FOR RHODES SCHOLAR

Would Have Won Derby Had It Started

HIS GRACE BEATEN BY SIX LENGTHS IN ECLIPSE STAKES

Sandown, Yesterday.

Glorious weather conditions prevailed yesterday when the Eclipse Stakes, which is one of the biggest non-classic races and one of the richest on the British Turf, was run, and the vast crowd that attended saw the odds-on favourite, Rhodes Scholar (8 to 1), owned by Lord Astor, spreadeagle the opposition to win by six lengths from Lord Carnarvon's His Grace (100 to 7), which was four lengths ahead of His Majesty the King's Fahey (8 to 1), which is still running in Lord Derby's colours owing to Court mourning.

The smashing performance of Rhodes Scholar, following his win over Mahmoud, the Derby winner, clearly showed that it is one of the best three-year-olds since the War and that it would certainly have won the Derby had it gone to the post, which shows Lord Astor's execrable luck in the classic, in which he has never been successful.

The following was the result of the race:—
1, Rhodes Scholar, 8 to 11
2, His Grace, 100 to 7
3, Fahey, 8 to 1.
Special place betting: 4 to 6 on Theft, evens on Thankerton and Fahey. There were nine starters.—Reuter.

HONOUR FOR K.C.C. MAN

Mr. R. P. Phillips, the popular member of the Kowloon Cricket Club, has been elected an honorary life member of the Shanghai Recreation Club. Mr. Phillips was President of the S.R.C. from 1922 to 1929.

"Bitty" Grant (U.S.) 7-5, 6-6, 6-4, 6-3, while Donald Budge, probably America's finest singles player and Wimbledon semi-finalist two years running, accounted for H. W. "Bunny" Austin, Britain's second string player, by 2-6, 6-0, 7-5, 6-7.

Perry will meet Budge to-day—he beat him in four sets in the Semi-Final Round at Wimbledon this year—while Austin will meet Grant in the remaining singles. (Later scores will be found on Page 20.)

YOUNG ENGLAND OF TO-DAY

Increase Of Juvenile Crime

An Enquiry Into Causes And The Remedy

(By A. G. GARDINER)

THE shopman who, on unlocking the door of his place of business in London one morning recently, was greeted from inside with the command, "Stick 'em up!" issuing from the lips of a boy with a revolver pointed at him, discreetly fled. When he returned with the police, three boys were discovered inside and duly arrested.

The incident is typical of a matter that is disturbing the public mind at the present time. This is the alarming increase of juvenile crime, mainly in the large towns. No one familiar with the work of the Juvenile Courts in London, for example, can doubt the increase, not only in numbers, but in the gravity of the offences.

Audacity

A recent case brought to light in the East London Court illustrates the latter point. Three boys of 15, 16 and 17 were convicted of five cases of shop-breaking in circumstances of extraordinary audacity. Their exploits were always performed on Sundays, and were carried out with great ingenuity. They had a technique for breaking the lock of a door, and, having broken it, two went inside, while the third affixed a dummy padlock outside and then loitered in the neighbourhood while his comrades collected their plunder.

When, after a due interval, the coast was clear, the watcher gave the signal, the door was opened, the boys inside came out, the dummy padlock was replaced and the operation was over. In this way these three boys had stolen property to the value of £150.

The fact should be remarked that these boys came from quite respectable homes and were all in good employment. The significance of this will be apparent later.

Youthful Criminals

Not the least disquieting feature of the increase of juvenile crime is the fact that it occurs among the very young—the under 14's. This is brought out very startlingly in the latest "Criminal statistics" for England and Wales, published by the Home Office. From this document it appears that whereas in 1929 the number of children under 14 convicted of indictable offences was 6,380, the number five years later had risen to 9,743.

Making every allowance for the fact that, because of the fall in the birth-rate during the war years, there were fewer children of 10 to 14 years in 1929 than in 1933, this growth of crime among the very young is alarming. Indeed, according to statistics recently issued by the Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, the peak age of juvenile crime is now lowered to 13 years!

Two questions are exercising the minds of those concerned for the future of the country, which depends more than anything else upon the moral standards of the rising generation. The first is the cause, or causes, of the deterioration.

Parental Control

One widely urged view is that it is mainly due to the breakdown of parental control. Children are no longer subject to the stern discipline of the home which prevailed in the past, and it is held that the truth of the axiom, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," is being evidenced by the results of the new doctrine that the way to bring up children is to let them bring up themselves. In the jargon of the time, "self-expression" is the one thing needful for the child. It is a doctrine that chimes in with the modern pleasure-loving tendency of the parents themselves.

This tendency runs through all grades of society. It is not unfairly illustrated by the remark of the lady in "Punch," who, being asked how her offspring was getting on, remarked: "Oh, beautifully. He does not interfere nearly so much with my bridge now." And if he is second to bridge in one class of society, he is apt to be second to the cinema in another. Freedom for the child means freedom for the parent.

And this loosening of the bonds at home is accompanied by the loss of the moral disciplines due to the tidal wave of unbelief that has swept society, especially in the post-war years. It may be said that those disciplines rested on fear, but they served as a moral police. They were a cement that held society together. The cement is perishing and we have not yet found an efficient substitute.

Chief Influences

Coupled with these causes are two other factors which are widely held to have a bearing on the problem. One is the new ideas of sexual morality which have their reaction on the child in the most critical years of its life.

The other is the influence of the cinema. Broadly speaking, it may be said that every child, in however poor a district, is a "film fan." It is seldom or never seen inside a church or a Sunday-school, but it is a regular habit of the cinema. And the cinema, which, wisely used, might have been the instrument for creating that moral cement of which I have spoken, is today merely a desolating debauch of the child mind. It feeds that mind with the garbage of gangsterism, crime and loose living, and its relation to the problem needs no emphasis.

How can we expect good citizenship to emerge from such a Fagin school? Grapes do not grow from thorns, nor figs from histles in twentieth century England any more than they did 'down in Judea.'

It is much easier to see the causes of the evil than it is to see the remedies. The old parental despotism has gone and even on its moribund side is unlikely to return. The cinema in its present hands is past praying for. Some students of the question hold that the Juvenile Courts, in their excessive concern to spare the rod, fail to impress the young criminal with the idea that he has done anything that matters. They hold that a certain element of fear must be the basis of morality, and that when fear of wrong-doing has gone out of the Church and out of the home it is the function of society to exercise it.

Directing Youthful Energy

But it is in positive and constructive directions that a check to the wave of juvenile crime must be looked for. It was not poverty or need that led those young East Enders to spend their Sundays in shop-breaking. It was the desire for adventure, the passion of escape from the drab monotony of life in the huddle of mean street that constitutes the East End.

Youthful energy must have its satisfaction in some direction, and if it cannot find it in good ways it will find it in bad. No one familiar with life in those huddles can marvel at its fruits. If we want a nation of good citizens we must reconstruct the East End and give playing fields and open spaces where the pent-up energies of youth can have wholesome exercise.

And there is another imperative need. Youth must be disciplined, and it is the school that must discipline it. Children must cease to be turned out on to the streets at fourteen.

Through the elementary school and through subsequent compulsory training they must be subjected to restraints and standards of conduct until the critical formative years to 18 have been bridged and the foundations of good citizenship established.

MR. AW BOON PAR'S NEW HOME IN COLONY

Palatial Mansion On Slopes Of Tai Hang

Unforgettable Walk In The Grounds

(By A Special Correspondent)

AS is the case with every self-made man, the life story of Mr. Aw Boon Par is interwoven with romance, and those who are of the opinion that everything has been a "bed of roses" for this gentleman, will be surprised to learn that he had to set out in the world at the very tender age of 15 years.

Born in Burma, Mr. Aw returned to China (Fukien) at the age of 10 to study his mother tongue, and then, after five years at school, he returned to his place of birth to assist in a medicine shop owned by his father.

From the very start he showed a keen aptitude for business, and, ever-ready to learn and to listen to the advice of his elders, he soon grasped all the fundamentals of the trade. Fifteen years later he went to Singapore, where several branches of his father's "Tiger" balm medicine shop had been opened up. Mr. Aw stayed in Singapore for about 15 years, during which time he made himself one of the best known and popular figures there. He has several mansions in that place and the well-known Hawpar Mansion of Singapore is looked upon as one of the sights of the city, and tourists who visit Singapore always make it a point of seeking permission to look over the palatial building.

Mr. Aw Boon Par came to Hong Kong about ten years ago, but, due to the fact that he is one of those people who believe in keeping rigidly in the background, he is not as well-known here as in Singapore, though the people of Cheung Chau, as well as the thousands of boat people in that vicinity, regard him as their one benefactor — it was Mr. Aw who donated the Cheung Chau Hospital, now run under the direction of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, to fill a crying want.

Already the owner of many houses, Mr. Aw added to his long list of residences when he built the Hawpar Mansion which stands out, in all its splendour, on Tai Hang hill, and at which a house warming party will be held on Tuesday next from 5.30 p.m. to 7.30 p.m.

The one feature about this building that strikes the visitor at once is that, despite its grandeur and majesty, it is the symbol of a man who does not believe in waste but who, at the same time, knows how to achieve that comfort and contentment which so readily escape less level-headed men.

PALATIAL MANSION

THE Hawpar Mansion has been erected at the cost of many thousands of dollars, yet an inspection of the premises shows that there is nothing superfluous about it. On the ground floor are the dining room, a spacious hall and two drawing rooms, one furnished in the most modern European manner and the other in true Chinese style. On the way upstairs one comes across Mr. Aw's own office or "den," where he attends to his vast business, and upstairs are four bedrooms, all of which are the last word in comfort.

A walk round the grounds is in itself an experience never to be forgotten. There is a small lawn, with a little pond, complete with tortoises, and a few steps away one comes across an artistically designed fountain. In each of the two "outside" corners of this small plot is a "resthouse," and just above the motor entrance are two ferocious-looking tigers guarding the mansion.

To the left is a beautifully laid out swimming bath, in white tiles, which is filled by the many streams of water running down the hillside at the back of the house, and one tier higher up is a lawn which could easily be converted into a tennis court.

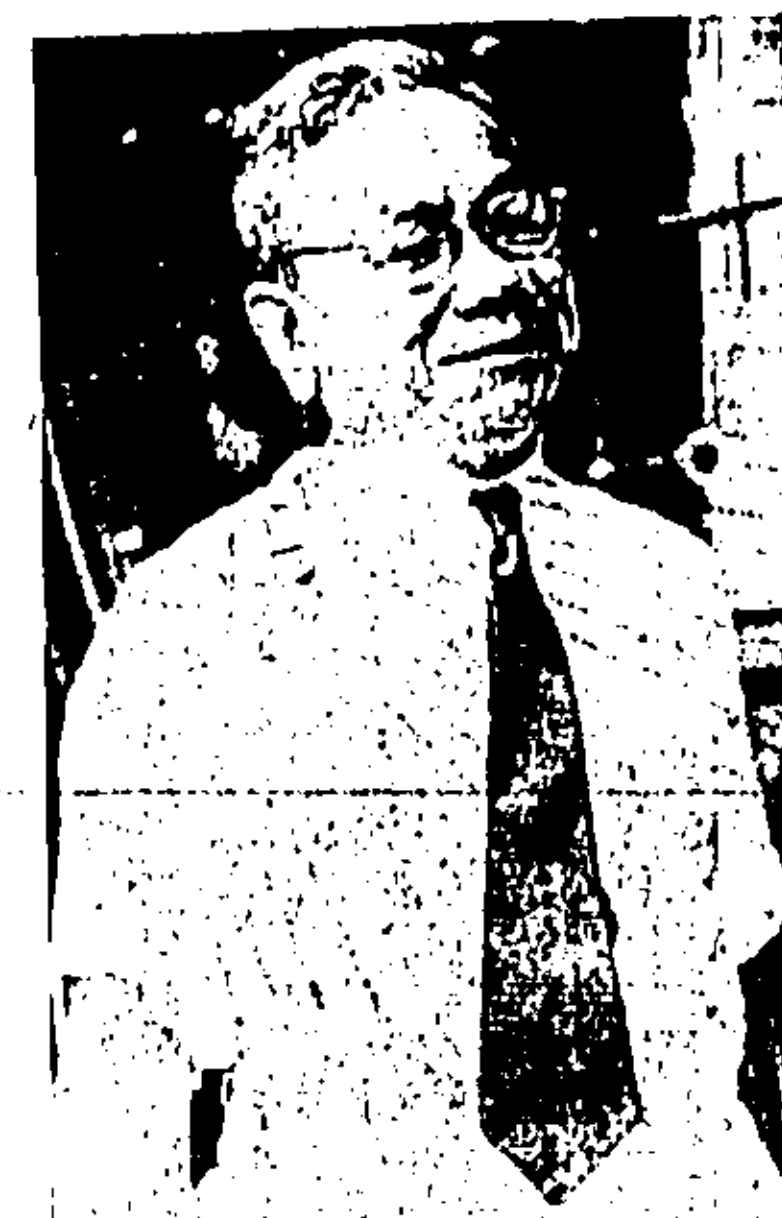

At the back of the house is a rock garden which is the last word in Chinese art, with images of storks perched here and there, and little rivulets running at random, and to the right of this is a huge eagle, in stone, perched on a large pedestal in the shape of a big piece of rock.

EVERYTHING DESIRABLE THE Hawpar Mansion has everything that is desirable, including the very important fung-shui. Situated as it is on the top of the Tai Hang hill, it commands a good view of the eastern portion of the harbour, while it overlooks Tai Hang itself, including the old polo ground. are the thatched village huts to remind one that in Hong Kong there still may be found reminders of ancient China.

Although the mansion is fitted up with electric fans, there appears to be little need for them as a breeze is always blowing — Mr. Aw Boon Par has certainly chosen a good site for his Hong Kong residence, which is indeed a credit to the Colony.

BLUE GILLETTES ARE CHEAPEST

Cheapest to use — if not to buy — because they provide you with the greatest number of perfect shaves. After all, it is the cost per shave not the cost per blade that matters. And Gillette's new electrical tempering process which puts two tempers into every Blue Gillette, ensures a keener, longer lasting cutting edge than has ever before been possible. In other words, much better shaves and many more shaves for the money.

HOT WEATHER DISTRESSING HEADACHES

THE common headache, excessive heat, humidity, fatigue, and lowered powers of bodily resistance are everyday conditions you must watch during the summer months. 'ASPRO' won't remove the heat and humidity, but it will smash up most headaches in 5 to 10 minutes. Simply swallow two or three tablets with a drink of water and lie down for about 10 minutes, if you can. You don't run any risk of injurious after-effects when you take 'ASPRO' for headaches, because it does not contain narcotics or dangerous drugs.

'ASPRO' is the ideal medicine for heat and summer complaints. It will check a cold almost immediately, and there is nothing better than 'ASPRO' to combat the dreaded Dengue. Three tablets taken at once will help to reduce the temperature and settle the nerves. The function of 'ASPRO' is to give quick, safe service to men, women and children. It attacks the seat of the trouble, dispels the cause, because after ingestion in the system it is a solvent of Uric Acid, a powerful germicide, is antiseptic—anti-pyretic, anti-periodic, and anti-fermentative.

THE PASSING HOUR

WHEN we read of the thousand people who have died in the heat wave that has been devastating North America, we may keep our sympathy warm also for the hundreds of thousands who have had their energy sapped without actually collapsing, and who will be a prey to all manner of minor ailments that otherwise they might have resisted. Imagination pales before the thought of what a temperature of 114 would mean in Hong Kong. Would it be possible? Would it not cure itself by producing a typhoon or something of that sort? At any rate we are probably justified in supposing that an island is saved from such excesses by the moderating influence of the sea, even though we grouse at the humidity which is the less desirable feature of the same protecting condition. Given a dry enough soil, with water a long way down from the surface, the stage of active discomfort as distinct from actual disaster gives a play of about an additional 20 degrees and, when the mercury is away up at midday, it often averages out by going away down in the hours between midnight and dawn. It often happens that the result is a peculiar feeling of elation about sunrise which is denied to more equable climates—the sort of feeling that inclines a man to vault over a table instead of walking round it.

SANDERS OF THE RIVER

THE heat wave combined with Edgar Wallace's film reminds me of a man with whom I once had official relations who was, like Sanders, a Native Commissioner in Nigeria. In the pioneer days his station had been established in a deep valley for the sake of the convenience of being near a river, and it got a very bad name. Man after man went down with malaria or some other tropical disease. A special allowance was ordained as an inducement to go there, and a year's leave on full pay followed a year's tour of duty. I could scarcely believe that my friend really came from such a station, for never have I met a man more robust, or with more physical strength. He had never had a touch of fever or anything else, after 10 years' residence. The explanation was that he had abandoned the official residence in the valley and built himself new quarters on the top of a neighbouring hill. As there was no grant from public money there was no official record of the change, and his privileges were not endangered. His only worry was that some day someone at headquarters would begin to wonder why it was that there were no more breakdowns, and his "sanitarium," as he called it, would be reduced to the normal pay.

EDGAR WALLACE

THE local knowledge which Edgar Wallace used with so much effect in this most popular of his stories was acquired as a private and then as Corporal and Sergeant in the R.A.M.C. He was stationed at Simon's Town in 1898, before the Boer War, and was busily educating himself by reading from the excellent local library. His first encouragement to be a writer came from Rudyard Kipling. Kipling was coming out to occupy the house lent to him by Rhodes on the Groote Schuur estate, and Wallace sent in an ode of welcome which was published in the Cape Times. It was a vigorous bit of composition, but little more than a close copy of the "Barrack Room Ballade." Kipling wrote him a pleasant note of thanks, and said he would be glad to see him. Wallace gladly accepted the honour of an interview, and very soon began to contribute regularly short stories. He afterwards had other stations, and a gift of observation, with a vivid imagination, were all that he required to give him his extraordinary success as writer for three people who wanted to be amused without having to think.

THE FILM

IS the film as we have it true to life? I have been asked this many times. There is no doubt about its having life, and a life inspired by knowledge of West African conditions. The weak point is the fair heroine, whose

THE WIDOW'S SON AT NAIN

TOUCHING STORY OF OUR LORD

FROM DEATH TO LIFE BY THE POWER OF GOD

(By the Rev. J. N. LEWIS BRKAN)

ONE of the most beautiful and touching incidents in the life of Our Lord is the story recounted in St. Luke's Gospel as having happened at Nain. He called the place a "city," and although to-day nothing remains of it but some very scanty ruins, yet they still show traces of walls and gates which prove that it was a place of some size. To judge by the name, which means "The Pleasant," it must have been in those days of some charm and beauty. To it, Our Lord and some of His disciples were making their way from Capernaum, a distance of some 25 miles. The "mighty works" which He had done in the latter city, including the very recent healing of the local Centurion's servant, resulted in His being followed by a great crowd, which had, no doubt, increased rather than diminished as they went along the road to Nain.

The Widow's Son

It must have been towards evening (which was the accustomed time for burial) when the two processions met just outside the town gates; Our Lord and the disciples with the crowd at their heels, and the widow with her dead son and "much people of the city with her"—for to show respect to the dead by accompanying them to the burying was a primary duty taught by the Jewish faith—and the crowd of mourners was therefore probably a pretty large one.

Something very much like a gasp of astonishment must have escaped the lips of those who were present, when Christ, instead of stepping to one side and standing reverently apart to let the funeral procession go by, walked straight on towards the bier and actually touched it! For, of all defilements, that of contact with the dead was reckoned the greatest. But here, as in the case of lepers, Christ had a fearless and deliberate disregard of ordinances, custom and tradition whenever their observance threatened to prevent an act of mercy.

The only kind of defilement He taught, which can happen to a man is that which comes from within, out of his own heart.

Raised From The Dead

So He did not hesitate to touch the wickerwork bier on which the dead youth was being carried. The body was not enclosed in a coffin, but simply laid upon the bier with the face uncovered. It is this Jewish manner of burying which explains why, when he revived, it was possible for him to sit up and "begin to speak."

Whenever we are dealing with one of Our Lord's mighty works, it is important to remember that quite half of their importance lies in what they teach. Practically every one of them, over and above being a work of mercy, was also an acted parable. It is in this case. As we think of Him dealing with this pathetic case, we must not only ask "what did He do?" but also "What did He wish to teach?"

light colour alone should have excluded her from the cast. She is too obviously Harlequin. Paul Robeson on the whole plays his part wonderfully well, if we allow for the difficulty of an educated man assuming a primitive identity. The small points in which it was possible to trace the influence of civilisation are not worth mentioning, for they would sound like hyper-criticism. The basis of the plot—that Africans will obey one man while they will only make trouble for another who seems to have the same qualifications—is quite true to life. It is the little overlooked element of the problem which will give the Italians in Abyssinia a lot of trouble, for the negro as a rule does not like Italians, Germans? The Germans were stricter than we are, and their punishments severe, but they were efficient, and the natives obeyed them in awe.

To be a childless widow is a sad enough fate in any country. Any one living in the East knows that well enough, but in Palestine it amounted to a tragedy; for apart from all the sorrow and desolation involved in bereavement there was also the extinction of that one great hope to which every Jewish mother passionately clung, to be the mother of the Messiah. To be childless was considered to be the greatest of all calamities.

The Comforter

The first thought of Christ was to bring comfort and sympathy. He who was Himself the son of a widow told this broken-hearted mother not to cry. What a perfectly human thing to do; just what you would expect from Him. But there is something of far more importance about the incident than just His sympathy. He was showing us what is in the mind of God with regard to human suffering and sorrow.

It is still all too commonly supposed that God sends disasters, bereavements and sorrows; and in consequence of this belief, there are many human hearts today filled with a smouldering, though perhaps inarticulate, resentment against God. I remember the case of an old woman, who carelessly left a broom at the top of the stairs and later fell over it and broke her leg. With what some people would call pious resignation she said, "I must take what the Almighty sends me. He knows best"—which is sheer unmitigated nonsense. God does not throw old women down stairs. He gives them eyes and a mind and, if they don't use them, it is not His fault. If, as we believe, Christ shows us the Face of God, then it cannot be true that He sends these things to us.

What is true is that, when they come, however they may come, He shares them with us, giving us His sympathy and comfort, and bidding us not to weep. That is the true picture of God as it has been painted for us by Christ; for when we look at Him we see what God is really like, and how He thinks and feels about us.

Love And Power

But there is something else here too; something which is more than just sympathy and comfort. There is a message not only about the love but also about the power of God. "He that was dead," we read, "sat up." It is not enough for us to know that He assured us of God's love; we want to be sure that He can and will raise us from death to life. Even more than we want a God who is sympathetic, we want a God in Whom whosever believeth shall live, though he die. This incident is recorded in the Gospels, not merely that we might believe that He raised a widow's son to life, but that He is Himself the Resurrection and the Life.

For it is upon Him alone that, for so many of us, there rests that great undying hope, which we have as an anchor of the soul; that, beyond the grave and gate of death, we shall see again, one day, through the love and power of God, those whom in this world we have loved and lost awhile.

Manoeuvring For Position

JUST at the moment those rather exceptional people who are able to watch affairs with a detached mind cannot fail to feel that the world seems to be in the grip of some fate of which the chief characteristic is a grim sardonic humour. Horace warned us against the mistake of letting our thoughts wander too far while our neighbour's house is on fire. The Kwang Provinces may not yet be technically at war with Nanking, but one of the curious results of modern armament technique and the craze for putting ever larger armies into the field is that the difference between being at war and being at peace has dwindled to a faint and wavering line, and it is now possible to secure all the disadvantages of war without coming to the point of "shots fired in anger."

Year after year the projected Canton-Hankow Railway was held back by adverse conditions. Quite rightly it was thought that what the interior of China most needed in order to raise the woefully low standard of living was better communications, particularly railway communication, to enable the inland districts to sell their produce and buy whatever they might most want to buy. The United States were the first to set aside the Boxer Compensation from the ordinary revenue. They made it an educational fund to train Chinese students—particularly engineers—at the American Universities. Our own act of repentance was belated, and had a more direct connection with commerce, but in the end it was decided to kill two birds with one stone. The money was extracted from the Treasury and set aside for the encouragement of railway construction, harbour improvement, and other useful purposes that might be expected to pay their own way when in use, and pay a decent dividend. When received, these dividends were to be used for the endowment of educational institutions and the provision of travelling studentships, and so on. Even in anticipation of any dividends grants have already been distributed with much discretion, where they will no doubt do much to help struggling centres of study and research.

The first large scheme of development was at length completed in the construction of the last stretch of the Canton-Hankow Railway. Professor Forster told the Rotary Club how he had been able to take a party of students on one of the first through trains, and this month it was expected that ordinary traffic would be running to a regular schedule.

At this stage the grimly humorous fate to which we have referred took a hand in events. Ordinary traffic must be suspended, and all the rolling stock must be commandeered—in order to carry troops and munitions and commissariat for an army which is manoeuvring either to overawe or actually to engage the army controlled by the Government that provided the finance to complete the railway. And the insurgent army is under the command of a General who came South at the suggestion of the same Government as "Pacificator of the South-West." To complete the picture, the opposing General has been appointed by the same Government with the same title.

To return to our remark that modern technique made it possible to secure all the disadvantages of war even without shots fired in anger. How would matters stand if a few more generals changed sides, and a friendly compromise were arranged? We must bring into account all the money that has been paid in the last two years in the purchase of military material. This alone would have been enough to complete the railway and double all the development grants so carefully allotted. In the absence of thousands of young recruits under training and requiring their pay every month it would have been possible to make regular payments to the civil staff. At the root of the present trouble is the inability of Nanking to remit the agreed subvention, and that is due to the loss of revenue through smuggling in the North. And one result of trying to cure financial difficulty by military pressure is the disorganisation of the currency, which will make it extremely hard for Canton to pay its own civil expenses.

Close at hand we can see the same grim humour working its will as in the wider world beyond, which made Puck exclaim: "What fools these mortals be!"

Hong Kong Personalities

This is the hundred and second of the exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Kony, the talented Hungarian artist.

MR. A. L. SULLIVAN

OUR Personality this week is Mr. Arthur Leslie Sullivan, Manager of the local branch of the Insurance Company of North America, which has its offices in the Bank of East Asia Building.

Mr. Sullivan was born on September 19, 1901, in Cork, Ireland, but left the Emerald Isle at an early age and received his education at Mercers' School, London. In 1916, after leaving school, he began the study of naval architecture, on the aeronautical side, principally as regards flying boats; but the War finishing in 1918, he abandoned his aeronautical studies for insurance and joined the Phoenix Insurance Co., eventually being sent out to their Shanghai office in 1922.

Travels In China

Acquiring a good knowledge of Mandarin, he was employed during the next seven years travelling all over North China in an intensive campaign to acquire Chinese business for his Company. In 1929, after a period of leave, he was sent to Hong Kong to travel South China with a like object.

The year 1933 saw him back in Shanghai. While there he received a tempting offer from the Insurance Company of North America, which he accepted, to open a branch for them here. The Insurance Company of North America is the oldest American company of its kind, having been incorporated in 1792. It is interesting to note that the incorporation took place in the same room in which the Declaration of Independence was signed. The Company effects every kind of insurance except life.

Tennis Successes

Mr. Sullivan's favourite recreations are tennis, rowing and badminton. While in Shanghai he won the Open Doubles and various Club Lawn Tennis Championships and since coming to Hong Kong has twice won the Hong Kong Cricket Club Championship.

He served for five years with the Shanghai Volunteers, Armoured Car Section, and went through some exciting times. He was rowing in the Henli regatta in 1925 when he was suddenly recalled for duty with his section at the time when General Chiang Kai-shek took the city.

NEW DIPLOMATS IN LONDON

London, Yesterday. — The new Spanish and Japanese Ambassadors in London, Senor Ollvan and M. Yoshida, on their appointment to the Court of St. James, paid courtesy calls on the Foreign Secretary at the Foreign Office yesterday. — British Wireless Service.

MODEL OF H.K. BANK

YOUNG MAN'S FINE
EFFORT

TO BE DISPLAYED IN LONDON OFFICE

By the Barber-Whitlamsen s.s. Taping there called for Home yesterday a lad of 18 who bids fair to make his mark later in the architectural world. He is Bruce Martin, son of Mr. H. Martin, M.I.E.E., Superintending Electrical Engineer of H. M. Dockyard, Hong Kong.

For the past two years young Martin has been studying, as pupil-draughtsman, with Mr. van Wylick, Manager and Architect of the Credit Foncier d'Extrem-Orient, he having shown, about a year previously, an unusual talent for modelling and design. During his time with Mr. van Wylick he has perfected an entirely original and unique system of model-making and has produced some exquisite models which have been entered for a scholarship competition at the School of Architecture, Bedford Square, London. He will himself enter the school as soon as he reaches London.

Finest Work

With him he is taking what is considered his finest piece of work — a scale model of the new Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank Building, which has been declared by Mr. Ritchie, of Messrs. Palmer and Turner, the designers of the building, to be the finest scale model in existence, and he has arranged for it to be displayed at the Bank's London office. The model, a photograph of which is shown here, is made entirely of cardboard and paper, with cellophane for the windows. The model stands about 18 inches high. About 300 working hours were employed in its construction.

Five Years Ago

(Extracts from the Sunday Herald of July 19, 1931).

The new premises of the National City Bank of New York were opened yesterday. Mr. F. Mc D. Courtney, manager of the Bank, welcomed the guests, while Mr. Jenkins, Consul-General of the United States, proposed the health of the Bank and Staff.

The closing of the Victoria British School, established in 1905, is announced. Mr. G. P. de Martin, Director of Education, would make no statement as to the use the Government intended for the premises.

The trials for the forthcoming swimming Interport were held at the Victoria Recreation Club last night. S. H. Wong (H.K.U.), Laing Sul-man (C.B.C.) and Yeung Yuen-wah (S.C.A.) were the newcomers who impressed favourably.

Mr. E. W. Hamilton has been appointed to succeed Mr. M. Breen as Postmaster-General.

LIFE AT FUNG KEONG WORKS

Smiling Faces At Every Turn

WITH reference to the article on the Fung Keong Rubber Manufactory, which appeared in our issue of June 21 last, it was stated that the workmen in the factory started work at 6 a.m. every day. The correct hour, however, is 7 a.m.

The tiffin interval is from 12 noon to 1 p.m., and almost every hand goes home for tiffin as they all live near the factory. Although at the present moment there is no recreation or rest room for the use of the employees, it is understood that the proprietors are securing a plot of ground near the works where the employees may go of an evening to enjoy the fresh air.

The question of a night school for the employees to improve their education is now holding the attention of those in charge and it will only be a matter of time before a night school will be established for the benefit of all Fung Keong workers.

In a conversation with one of the factory girls, it was learned that life in Fung Keong's was a contented one for them and this statement was borne out by the smiling faces one saw in every department.

"GOLD RUSH"

Local Share Market
Still Almost At Standstill

GAMBLING ELEMENT CHECKED

For the last few months, the local share market has more or less been at a standstill, due to the fact that those connected with it have concentrated their attention on the gold mining shares in Manila, so much so that the situation has been described as the "mine craze" or "gold rush."

As is already known, many local brokers have made the trip to Manila recently to seek first-hand information about the gold mines and every one of them appears highly satisfied with what they saw. The result is that large parcels of shares have been secured for and by local investors or speculators and in some cases big profits have been made.

For some time now forward business in these gold mining shares has been done, though those concerned are very careful regarding the transactions. In this connection it is interesting to note that no forward business is done on the Manila Stock Exchange, all the transactions being on a cash basis. In spite of this, however, a tremendous business is being done there, and from a reliable source it is learned that over 10 million pesos changed hands in the course of last week.

As a result of this concentration on the Manila stocks, local shares have been badly neglected and in some cases declines have been noticed.

A little forward business has also been done in local shares but under the new rule the numbers of the share scrips are required in all such transactions so that very little scope is left for the gambling element.

H.M. THE KING'S WAR EXPERIENCES

DIARIES PRESENTED TO IMPERIAL WAR MUSEUM

ACCOUNTS of H.M. King Edward's war experiences in France when he was Prince of Wales are contained in diaries and documents which have been presented by His Majesty to the Imperial War Museum.

King Edward went to France as Aide-de-Camp to Field Marshal Sir John French in November, 1914.

He remained there until March, 1916, when he was appointed Staff Captain at the headquarters of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force.

One of the documents gives a striking indication of King George's desire that his son should be treated as an ordinary officer.

Letter To Commander

It is a letter addressed to the Commanding Officer of the Grenadier Guards, and is dated Aug. 8, 1914, immediately after King Edward had received his commission in the battalion. It reads:

I have the honour to convey to you His Majesty's commands, which are as follows. That no honours or salutes to which the Prince of Wales is entitled as Prince of Wales should be rendered to His Royal Highness by the battalion in which he is serving, or by any brigade to which his battalion may belong.

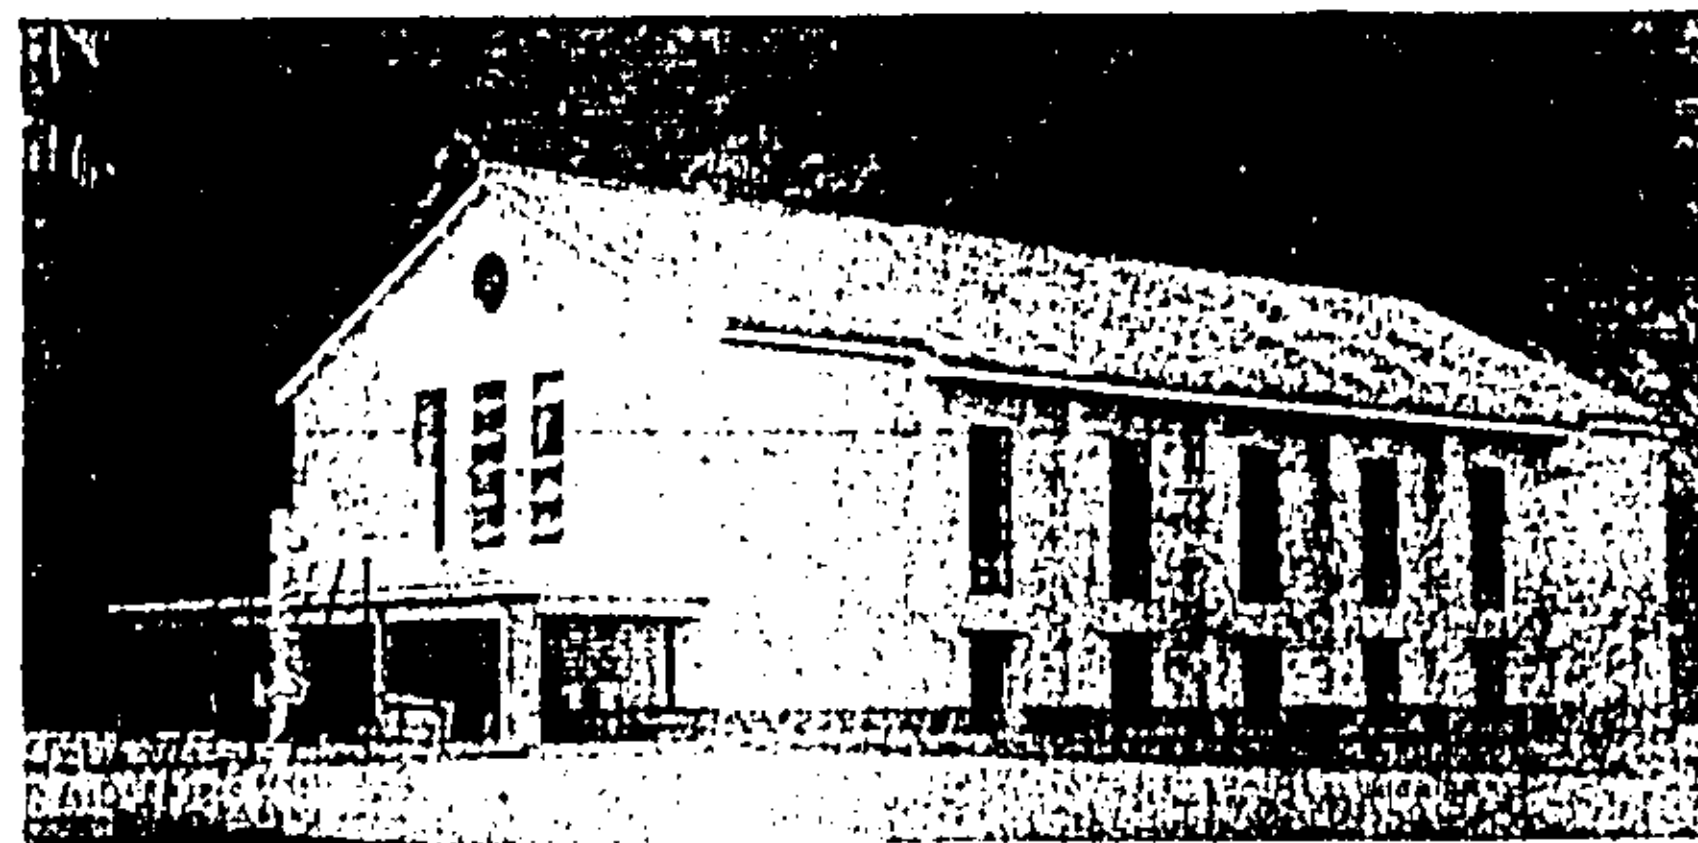

The King's wish is that the Prince of Wales should be treated exactly as any other officers of the battalion.

The letter was signed by Lt.-Col. William Carington, Keeper of the Privy Purse.

In Wooden Box

The diaries and documents are contained in a small wooden box fastened only with a brass hook and eye.

Among other interesting papers in the collection is a tiny crimson note-book which bears in gold lettering on the cover the words, "Field Report Book." It is similar to that issued to officers during the war.

SCIENCE MAKES POSSIBLE this marvellous razor!

When you have shaved with a "SIRAMA" just run your hand over your face. Ordinary razors cut the beard, the "SIRAMA" shears the beard; and there is a world of difference between the two actions; a difference so appreciated by men with tender skins and tough beards and by those who realise the importance of being perfectly shaved. The "SIRAMA" shears off the beard without pulling or tugging, off comes the hair, just 'once over' and you have had the finest, smoothest and easiest of shaves.

A tiny electric motor operated by a small battery, which lasts for months, makes the blade oscillate, this action shears off the beard independent of any pulling motion: constructed on the safety razor principle, using ordinary double edged blades.

With a "SIRAMA" you get a perfect shave.

H.M. King Edward VIII and his father, the late King George V, in a portrait made last year.

The entries are made in the King's neat, small handwriting, in pencil. Although they were written over 20 years ago, most of the words are easily decipherable.

The first entry, which is dated June, 1914, apparently refers to the King's participation in Oxford University O.T.C. manoeuvres at Aldershot.

Before the next entry, war had been declared. Under the date, Aug. 14, 1914, are the words: "Left at 9.45 for Gt. Warley."

Arrival In France

Then on Page 4 is the revelation that the writer had arrived in France. The first entry after he had landed read:

Nov. 18, 1914.—

Cassel Meteren Mont Noir.
Bailleul Gen. Rawlinson (4th corps).

Nieppe lunch 1.0.0.

Scots Greys at farm.

Nieppe bathing installation at brewery 9.2in howitzer and 6in gun.

Clearing hospital at Bailleul. Back here at 6.30 walking from Arques. Weather fine and bright, warm.

Other entries, undated, under the heading, "1st Army," read:

6.30: Gas started 5.50; Moving well, but slowly, accurate but not heavy shelling 8 Div. in trenches.

6.46: Gas and smoke effective with 1st and corps French at Givenchy taken.

7.53: Air report states smoke extends 3 miles back.

8.0: Prisoner states only 7 corps and 6 Bav. R. Div. in reserve.

Complete surprise (undecipherable) crossed front line but obscured by smoke advance slow as it hangs. 2nd Div. success at Givenchy Meurit taken 120 prisoners.

24: Railhead Lillers.

25: Ferpay Noeux les Mines. Div. moved up into area vacated by 21st Div. with its head at Noeux and tail at Labassiere. Not in till 2.0.0. Refilled at Bubrose.

26: Div. moved up in afternoon to front lines. Artillery moved up to 1st Batt. area. Train moved to Noeux after refilling at Maillécourt.

4th Corps 6.30.

Among other papers are secret documents relating to the ships of the Royal Navy before and during the war. They are enclosed in an envelope bearing the autograph of Mr. Winston Churchill, who was the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Drawing Of Soldier

There is also an envelope with the words, "Piece of envelope Airship L 15, which landed in the Thames April 1, 1916, having been damaged by gunfire." The fragment is enclosed.

The Museum has also 300 war maps used by the King when Prince of Wales. Some of these bear names of places written by him in script handwriting.

On one map there is a small drawing in pencil of a British infantryman wearing a tin helmet. It is believed to have been drawn by the present King.

There are also two beautifully bound volumes presented to the King, when Prince of Wales, by the Italian Army headquarters. One contains some wonderful photographs of Italian war scenes. The other consists of magnificent relief maps of the war areas in which the Italian armies were engaged.

No decision has been reached as to whether these documents will be shown to the public when the Museum is opened. If it is decided to exhibit them, they will probably be displayed in a glass case.

Mainly about WOMEN

Woman Comes Through With Flying Colours

"A lipstick is as necessary to a woman's health and happiness as food and drink," says Mrs. Virginia Jencks, Congresswoman from Indiana, who, herself no flapper, recently launched a drive in New York to repeal the tax on cosmetics. Of course! A woman without cosmetics—a flower without colour or perfume.

Christian Berard, the inspired arbiter of fashion to the cream of the haute monde in Paris seeks now to gain effective Gaudin results in make-up. He urges women to turn into primitive queens on the beach; flamboyant, rich in colour, their skin polished, their eyebrows, nostrils and ear-tips painted bright coral as well as their lips. And that, he claims, is not pure fan-not allowed to touch the lips of a young woman.

But we moderns know our history. We know just how wrong dear grandmother is. Cosmetics are as old as the human race, starting with the primitive habit of tattooing the body. If we examine the highly developed cosmetics of the Egyptians we find that our modern cosmetics have nothing on theirs. Their women not only applied colours to their finger and toe-nails, but to their teeth too. And among the Egyptians, Romans and Greeks the men made just as much use of cosmetics as women.

All considered, it seems cosmetics have very little to do with good or bad morals, but more with man's aesthetic desire for perfection. That desire which not only makes him transform his environment according tasy, but also pure effort. Plant-like and decorative, woman will go to any lengths to gain the desired effect; she must feel poised, proud, dramatic. And grant her this—there are times when she succeeds.

Usually, even now, the word cosmetics is associated with all those things which describe the post-war disintegration of morals. According to our grandmothers, cosmetics are a very "modern" invention (modern, of course, meaning all that is contrary to the good old times), and in her time, in respectable society, one not only did not use lipstick, but even the word was to his aesthetic standards, but also his body.

Not so long ago men were something to dazzle the eye with their curled hair, embroidered waistcoats and lacy wrists. But nowadays their dress is purely utilitarian, with very little, even, in the way of kindly disguise. The modern man spends most of his time outside the home and the nature of his occupations supply the reason for his utilitarian garb. Even in the army the decorative uniform has given way to a more drab but more useful, more "masculine" outfit. Sport, too, does away with the decoration in clothes. In short, masculine beauty as we regard it to-day could not be aided by the use of colour or cosmetics.

Women, on the other hand, still have the leisure and the desire to create for themselves the decorative and romantic. And man encourages it, for through her he can still keep the decorative and romantic in his life. She seeks in her designs and her material effects to accentuate her special beauty, and then to harmonise her face and hands with her dress she uses cosmetics. Very rare is the woman who is not more lovely for a little touching-up. And especially so at night. The bright, artificial light accentuates the brilliance of her silks, but gives her face an added paleness. Then she uses her ingenuity and her cosmetics and the result is not at all bad! Serene, she faces the cruellest glare and delights her escort, who, himself uninterestingly garbed and groomed, finds all his aesthetic pleasure through his partner and that art so essential to her health and happiness!

Actually the fight should not be against the use of cosmetics, but against the unskilled use of cosmetics. The young woman does well to learn the real art of make-up, for beyond a doubt it is an art. A good lesson could be learned from our local Chinese women who make use of cosmetics and make use of them well. It is one of the first things that strikes the traveller to Hong Kong—how decorative, how beautifully made-up is the Chinese woman.

About TOWN

SCHOOL Prize-days are apt to be very monotonous affairs except to the scholars themselves and their parents, but Dr. T'so set an excellent precedent in outlining the history of the College at Stanley for the benefit of His Excellency the Governor. The public in general is no less in his debt, and the good example seems to have been followed by several other of the institutions of which we have every reason to be proud. The special interest of Dr. T'so's speech was the very honourable history of the attempt to acclimatise under such different social conditions so very national an institution as the English "Public School." It is characteristic of the national idiosyncrasy that the "Public Schools" should be the only schools that do not receive any public money or admit any inspection by public officials. It is at any rate a testimonial to the venerable system that Dr. T'so's recollections of his own boyhood should have led him to be confident that done better with a private tutor, but they are more often the merely self-assertive people who have never had any intention of learning that lesson, and who are "up against it" wherever they are. The great majority of boys benefit by the training and recollect old times with affection.

The Collegians are on the list of the old foundation, dating back perhaps to the original founder of centuries ago, but the numbers are limited and they really constitute only a "house" that happens to be large. The original curriculum was extremely narrow, being little more than Latin taught with extreme accuracy of grammar and syntax. The "Old Eton Grammar," which was imported to most other schools, was itself written in Latin, without any English explanatory notes. It was the Renaissance that brought wider scope of study and thought, under the influence of men like Erasmus and Colet, who founded St. Paul's School, with the choir boys as a first class. St. Paul's is a day school, as it has always been, and, in the studies for which scholarships are given at the universities it has always led the way, though the Pauline list of the men who have made history would be rather insignificant compared with the schools of older foundation.

Objects in Life

THE last revolution has some beginnings further back, but only in the present century did it come in with a flood. Even the oldest schools now have their laboratory. They teach modern languages and history and all the rest of it. School days are after all only a short period of our life, and a man must earn a living. The controversy between the ideals of "culture" and "useful training" has waxed hot, and as usual it has been mostly a contest of words. The old school would have said that it aimed at making men who could afterwards take up any profession they it could be transferred to the Orient with a good chance of taking root.

MORE than most old institutions, the Public School has been furiously attacked by the modern democrat, usually on the ground that it removes the scholar from the benefit of home influences, and that thereby it encourages class spirit and social prejudice. If that were either the object or the necessary result of it, it might well be contended that it was opposed to the Chinese family confraternity and the easy equality with which one man treats another in China in the social life of China. But the essence of the thing is the tradition of loyalty as a good thing in itself, and the organisation by which it is cultivated. The foundation is the "house" and the house-master. An old Etonian meeting another does not tell him that he was "at Eton," but at "So-and-so's". The division into houses enables a school to expand to large numbers without any miscellaneous herding together. There may be, as at Eton, "Collegians" as well as "Oppidians."

A still bigger wave of reform came from a school which was not one of the old circle at all, though it had existed as a local day school. The great Dr. Arnold took hold of quite an insignificant foundation at Rugby and by his personal influence made its name famous partly by more modern methods such as the regular essay, which would be carefully criticised, but chiefly by a complete reform of the discipline. Instead of the strict tyranny of the master he substituted the "prefect"—making the school a small community which governed itself, subject only to general supervision and occasional intervention in emergencies. The old fagging with the tyranny of the bully was charged to a regulated system which had many uses in teaching the youngster that he was but a unit in a society which was more important than himself. One meets from time to time men who look back to their early days at school with resentment and rebellion. These are sometimes the exceptionally gifted or sensitive type who might have liked. The new school aimed at making professional men who could afterwards take up any culture they liked. The truth is that school years do not carry anyone very far towards the special knowledge required for success in these days of specialisation, and the great thing is in those formative years to imbibe a generous and manly outlook on life, but it is also true that they should give a boy his first steps into a fairly wide range of interests so that he can recognise where his own faculties will be most usefully applied. It is comparatively rare for a man to take up a new line and succeed in it if he never had his first initiation in boyhood. Beyond that it is true that we go on learning to the end of our lives, and when we stop learning we stop being useful to the world.

The best service the school at Stanley can give to the East is to send men full of its own tradition to take their chance in those big countries that have awakened to the power of modern science, and are waiting for guidance in how best to apply the new learning.

YOLA AND PAUL BACK AGAIN

Uproarious Reception
At H.K. Hotel

PRINCE WHO WAS LOOKING FOR A BRIDE

(By A Special Correspondent)

The dinner dances at the Hong Kong Hotel are always "thoroughly enjoyable" affairs, and, despite the intense heat, last night's function proved no exception. The main reasons were that, with their usual thoroughness, the management saw to it that the hall was kept enjoyable cool throughout the evening, but what was better still was the fact that there were two old favourites, Yola and Paul, back again to help us forget even the heat with four of the best dances they have ever done in the Colony. To say that they received an uproarious reception would be but giving a modest account of the whole show; they were good without parallel, in fact.

The last time we had the pleasure of their company here was some two years ago, and since then they have travelled far and wide. They went, they saw, they conquered, and they have come back to our midst for, alas! an all too short stay. It was originally their plan to spend only the week-end here, but they have gracefully acceded to popular demand and will be appearing just once more, next Saturday, before going away. In the meantime, however, the patrons of the Hong Kong Hotel will be delighted to learn that they will probably make an appearance at one of the tea dances during the week, when they will introduce to us the Cuban Danzon, or in other words, the real social style of the Rumba.

Both Yola and Paul were very enthusiastic about their tour of the East. During the past couple of years they have visited Manila, Colombo, the Federated Malay States, Bombay, Calcutta and Australia and in each place they were very well received, and each initial appearance resulted in demands for more exhibitions from this popular couple.

Mysterious Request

Yola told me that they were invited to dance in the Sultan of Johore's Palace, but said that their most interesting experience was when, in Bombay, they were approached by an unknown lady who asked if they were prepared to go to an unknown place to perform eighteen dances. When told that it was impossible for two people to do so many dances in one night, the mysterious stranger said that there was no objection to other artists coming into the show and so, with the help of four others, Yola and Paul set out from their Hotel after dinner in a motor car, together with the mysterious stranger, for their unknown destination. This however, was not very far away, but on entering the house they found themselves in a hall with an Indian seated in a divan, at one end, with two attendants on either side.

"On with the dance," was the request, and dance they did, and it was only after they had completed their programme that they were told that they had just danced before a prince. Just as they were about to leave, added Yola with a smile, the mysterious woman approached them and asked if all the ladies in the company (and there were three of them) were married, and she seemed quite disappointed when given the reply in the affirmative, for here was obviously a case of a prince looking for his bride.

Yola, it may be interesting to know, is the special travelling world correspondent for the Evening News of India and sends them articles from all parts of the world—just wherever she may be. She said that if she had her way she would always stay in Hong

LOCARNO POWERS TO CONFER

THREE-PARTY TALKS WANTED IN PARIS BRITISH OBJECTIONS VOICED

London, Yesterday.

The decision apparently reached in Paris yesterday to hold a conference of the three Locarno Powers in London has not yet been officially communicated to London, where the opinion is expressed that it is difficult to see how a three-Power conference can take things much further than could be carried in diplomatic channels.

An exchange of views on the subjects which will probably be discussed later at the five-Power conference is all that is generally expected in London from a three-Power meeting. Undoubtedly British Ministerial circles are most anxious not to miss the opportunity of making a big effort to remove the rest in Europe. If successful progress were to be made at the five-Power meeting so that matters beyond the decision of the five Powers were raised, then a third stage would be tentatively visualised in London, whereby the five-Power meeting would resolve into a European conference. — Reuter.

FOR AMENDMENT

At next Tuesday's meeting of the Urban Council there will be considered a letter from the Government signifying the approval of the Legislative Council to the rescission of by-law 1 contained in the Schedule of the Hawkers Ordinance, 1935, under the heading "B. Licensed (Itinerant) Hawkers."

Amendment

By-law 6 is rescinded and the following by-law is substituted there:—

6. All market stalls shall be let by the Council in the manner following and upon the following conditions:—

(1) They shall be let for the sale of specified commodities, without fine or premium, from month to month, for a rental to be ascertained by sealed tenders. The Council shall not be bound to accept the highest or any tender; provided that in the case of the closure of a market the Council may in its discretion reserve for stall-holders in that market such stalls in any market as it may think fit, and provided also that if a lessee dies his stall may be let to his son or sons or other near relative in his stead.

(2) One month's notice of the discontinuance of any letting shall be given by either the Council or the lessee as the case may be.

Rents Payable

(3) All rents of market stalls shall be paid to the Council quarterly in advance within the first two weeks of the quarter. If a stall be let from a date which is not the beginning of a quarter, any period of half a month or more shall be charged as one month and any period less than half a month shall not be charged.

(4) The lessee shall duly and punctually pay and discharge all rates, taxes and other assessments and any meter rent or charges for excess water consumption in respect of the stall.

(5) If it is proved to the satisfaction of the Council that the lessee has contravened or suffered or permitted the contravention of any of these by-laws or has failed to observe and perform any of the agreements on his part contained in his lease, the Council may forthwith and without any refund of rent or other compensation determine his tenancy and re-enter upon the leased premises.

AIR FORCE DESERTS GEN. CHEN'S NEW SETBACK

Four Planes Arrive
In Colony

REST LEAVE OVERNIGHT
FOR SHAO KWAN

It is reported that defections from the Canton Air Force have proceeded at such a pace recently that General Chen Chai-tong has now been left without a single plane for the defence of the South-west.

Yesterday morning four planes arrived at Kai Tak aerodrome at an early hour, carrying eight pilots and one unknown passenger. They left Canton on Friday night in company with the remaining machines of the Canton Air Force, which, it is reported, have proceeded to Shaokwan, which is now in the hands of the Central Government's troops. The reason the four planes chose Hong Kong as their destination was that they lacked sufficient fuel to accompany the others.

Enquiries from the Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Mr. R. A. C. North, elicited the following official statement:—

"Four planes arrived at Kai Tak this morning from Canton without notice. They will be kept here while the position is explored. It is understood that they are training machines from the Flying School.

"Any Chinese machine coming here must give notice beforehand."

The Hon. Mr. North stated that the pilots would not be detained should they desire to leave, but the planes, which are in the civil hangar, would, naturally be held.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Bucharest, Yesterday.
The inter-Cabinet struggle seems to have strengthened the position of M. Titulescu once more. The Rumanian Foreign Minister made a statement in the paper Universul, in which he declared that he considered it the natural thing that Rumania should try to live on friendly neighbourly relations with Russia, her neighbour with 170,000,000 inhabitants and a country allied to Rumania's allies.

Rumania also wanted to live in friendship with Germany, but in the first place Rumania's friendship belonged to the States of the Little Entente, Poland, the Balkan Union, England and France. With the latter State Rumania had not only common ties of race and common interests, but also common efforts were made for the sake of peace. — Trans-Ocean Service.

GEN. CHEN LEAVES FOR HONG KONG RETIREMENT FROM THE POLITICAL ARENA?

ASSASSINATION OF BROTHER
REPORTED BUT UNCONFIRMED

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Yesterday.

With heavy odds against him, General Chen Chi-tang, head of the Kwangtung Army and virtual ruler of the province, is reported to have left here yesterday afternoon by train for Hong Kong. A circular telegram announcing his retirement may be issued to-day.

People here welcome the impending retirement of General Chen Chi-tang, because this means that the much-dreaded civil war will be averted. In this event, General Yu Hon-mou will come to Canton to become Pacification Commissioner of Kwangtung.

It was rumoured yesterday afternoon that Mr. Chen Wai-chow, brother of General Chen Chi-tang, popularly known as the power behind the throne, had been assassinated by his own bodyguards. Circulated in banking circles, this report is not confirmed.

Ying Tak has been abandoned by the Kwangtung troops, who are now concentrated at Chun Tien (Kwun Teen), 40 mile north of Canton. If General Chen resigns, bloodshed will be avoided.

RED CROSS UNIT MISSING

Great Anxiety Felt
In Sweden

NO NEWS FROM ABYSSINIA

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Stockholm, Yesterday.

Very great anxiety is felt here about the fate of the Swedish Red Cross unit in Abyssinia, of which no news has been received since May. The unit was then sighted by planes about 400 miles south-east of Addis Ababa. It was assumed at that time that the unit was heading for the Addis Ababa-Djibouti line, but since then nothing has been heard or seen of the unit. The unit was stationed near Dolo, and had been bombed by the Italians, resulting in the death of an assistant doctor named Lundstrom.

The Swedish Foreign Minister declared that the Government would take "exceptional measures" in order to clear up the situation. Before the announcement of these measures, however, certain foreign Governments must be informed. — Trans-Ocean Service.

GOOD RESPONSE TO APPEAL

London, Yesterday.

Scores of telephone messages were received at Scotland Yard last night in response to the appeal for witnesses of the incident at Constitutional Hill. A C.I.D. officer has been detailed specially to deal with these calls.

There have also been a number of personal callers, and it was expected that the first post to-day would bring statements that must be investigated. Every informant will be interviewed, and several days are likely to elapse before a complete report is available. — Reuter.

London: Results of enquiries so far confirm both the belief that the arrested man is unconnected with any organisation, and the general impression that his behaviour was the result of the effect of some fancied grievance on an unbalanced mind.

Large crowds gathered outside Buckingham Palace yesterday and expressed in repeated cheering their relief that the unhappy incident had passed without harm to the King. — British Wireless Service.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Intellectual Committee At Work

PLENARY SITTING HELD

London, Yesterday.

The International Committee on Intellectual Co-operation is at present holding at Geneva under the chairmanship of Professor Gilbert Murray (United Kingdom) its 18th session for examining the work accomplished during last year by divers bodies of intellectual co-operation, as well as that of the Paris Institute of Intellectual Co-operation. The plenary sitting of the committee was preceded by the meetings of several consultative committees.

Professor Gilbert Murray, re-elected chairman, opened the 18th session by paying homage to the memory of two of its oldest and best workers, the Italian Alfredo Rocco and the Belgian Jules Destrées.

The committee then examined the question of unemployment among intellectuals. It took note of the initiatives taken in different countries for creating intellectual work by forming centres for Intellectuals' Employment Bureaux.

International Bureau?

The committee foresees the creation of an international bureau of information concerning the means of combating unemployment among intellectuals. For combating unemployment it discussed the possibility of reorganising secondary teaching. It took note of a volume published by the Intellectual Co-operation Institute on "Organisation of Higher Teaching," containing eight chapters regarding Germany, Spain, the United States, France, the United Kingdom, Hungary, Italy and Sweden. It also took note of the activities of the different international students' organisations incorporated in the Liaison Committee.

Relations With China

The Intellectual Co-operation Committee's relations with Chinese reorganisation work were also examined, as well as the progress achieved in different countries regarding the revision of school text-books for putting them into conformity with League ideals. The committee also took note of the work accomplished by the Intellectual Co-operation Institute in the domain of libraries and archives, and of its publication of an Ibero-American collection. Finally it examined the question of the scientific studies of international relations and took measures for continuing the enquiry begun last year on Man and Machine.

The governing body of the Institute met on July 15 with M. Edouard Herriot (France) as chairman. He congratulated the Institute on its excellent administrative work and finances, and underlined that in spite of the crisis the Institute work has not suffered. For the financial year 1935/1936 seventeen States subsidising the Institute have sent a contribution, and the body hopes that they will do the same for 1937.

Two Withdrawals

Honduras and Nicaragua informed the League respectively on July 10 and 15 of their decision to leave the League at the end of two years. These communications were transmitted to the other member States.

The sub-committee for Teaching of the League of Nations met on July 8 and 9. This committee in its previous session decided to use its efforts towards the better teaching of history, geography and modern languages from the point of view of the League of Nations. It took note of the appreciable results hitherto obtained in this domain and foresees the possibility of sending various suggestions to the Governments and professional associations. The committee also examined a report submitted by M. Plagot, Director of the International Bureau of Education, on the teaching of modern languages as a means of making better known the spiritual gifts of the divers nations. — British Wireless Service.

OLD BOY'S BRONZE

A bronze tablet, was unveiled last month by the Marquess of Bath at Fitzmaurice Grammar School, Bradford-on-Avon, in memory of Lord Fitzmaurice, a founder and for 30 years chairman of governors.

Heinrich Himmler, above, commander of the Schutzstaffel (Nazi special guards), has been made chief of the German police in the Ministry of the Interior by Reichleader Hitler. The position is the all-important police post in the Third Reich.

HEROIN PILLS

Inprisonment Without The Option

HEAVY SENTENCE ON YOUNG WOMAN

Man Yau-lin, a Chinese girl aged 19, who was charged last Saturday with possession of 12,000 heroin pills, was sentenced to nine months' hard labour without the option of a fine by Mr. C. B. Burgess at the Central Magistracy yesterday morning.

Mr. McCallum appeared for the defendant and wanted to plead guilty to possession but not to knowledge, but His Worship said that he had already taken the plea at the last hearing.

Mr. MacCallum pleaded for mitigation of any sentence, but His Worship remarked that mitigation would only encourage people to engage young girls for the business.

Revenue officer Grimmitt reminded His Worship that he had spent a long time in trying to get the girl to tell him who gave her the pills, but she had refused to talk, and that in Court at the last hearing, even before His Worship, she remained obdurate.

R. O. Grimmitt concluded that the defendant was not a school-girl, though when arrested she had all the appearance of one and that the pills were found hidden in a basket containing school books. There were no extenuating circumstances, and, he asked for a heavy penalty.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

LANE, CRAWFORD'S are cultivating the very latest summer blooms. And what exactly do I mean by that? Well, I'll have to explain because they are so new I'm certain you haven't even heard of them yet. Lovely and exotic Russian haloes! The smartest floral headbands you've ever seen. And whether you're a bridesmaid or simply a maid in love, they're just the thing for you. Pastel-coloured azalea blossoms mingled with violas, sprays of mignonette, daisies and forget-me-nots intertwined, handsome gardenias, or the freshest of rosebuds. They have a wonderful selection!

Is it true that NOXEMA is made of pure gold? . . . No my dear, that is just the exaggeration of some NOXEMA enthusiasts. But it is worth its weight in pure gold. Try it if you have never used it before and you will soon be one of the chorus . . . singing the praise of NOXEMA. And you don't need to sing in the rain, but in full sunshine—with NOXEMA you have nothing to fear from sunburn. From all the leading Dispensaries. Sole Distributors: United Traders, Pedder Bldg.

Some day you will be faced with marriage. It might be you . . . or you . . . or maybe you. He might not be a rich man—and I suppose you like to look your best just the same. Or perhaps you said "I will" long ago and still have not learned the secret of being a well-dressed woman economically. I am just bursting to tell you the magic word: PAUL RENNET'S! There you get sale prices all the year round and, on top of that, sales too. There's one this week. Dresses like a dream going at prices that will make you dream. And 25 per cent. off the loveliest shoes.

When in this stifling heat you are bothered with perspiration . . . what can more effectively bring you the illusion of a cool spring breeze than a drop of the finest French perfume? Where can you get the greatest selection of them? The answer, in capital letters, is "GRAND DISPENSARY." You need no introduction to these names: Bourjois, Caron, Chanel, Coty, D'Orsay, Guerlain, Houbigant, Letheric, Molyneux, Roger & Gallet. Names with traditions and a definite meaning to all women in the world. You can get their products at the GRAND DISPENSARY for reasonable prices.

Hats, and hats, and hats, all at half price—yes, every one of them. That's the good news this week from DOLLY VARDEN'S. And what hats! Enough to rouse the latent chivalry in any male breast. I won't say that they guarantee an elopement, but certainly an exciting time on every occasion. There are easy, casual hats, cool as water-ice; big hats, real cartwheels, for your silks and prints; or the happiest little berets and bonnets. The loveliest shades too, from the coolest pastels to the very heart of the rainbow. And DOLLY VARDEN'S always have the very latest styles in their spick and span little shop.

If you want the new books, the books worth reading, BREWERS BOOKSHOP is the place you must visit. They have just got in Aldous Huxley's new book, "Eyeless in Gaza." And a new book by Huxley, as you know, is an event to go down in the records. Then another new book on sale at BREWERS is "The Apostle of the Indies," (a life of St. Francis Xavier). This is of special interest in view of the Roman Catholic pilgrimages leaving this year from Canton and Macau to Sancian Island.

I knew a girl once who married a rich man and went to live in Los Angeles. I didn't envy her her husband, her expensive car, or all the other comforts she could afford. But I did envy her being so near the fashion centre of the world and always being able to wear the latest creations. But that was B. M. Before MAIZEE'S. Now you can consider yourself living right at the well of fashion. MAIZEE'S brings you the very latest as fast as it is created. What did you say? Helena Rubinstein? Of course, my dear. Those cosmetics are "class"—and MAIZEE'S sells them.

If the person who said that the Lido looks like a warship is right, then the effect will be complete next week, because I'm quite sure that everybody will appear in those most original sailor slacks that MAYO'S SHOPPE has just got in. They'll be the rage of the town. Made of the lightest aertex, they are long and light and charming. Stays on the collar, buttons down the side, and the happy contrast of two colours. Dressed up in them you'll feel pretty exultant over the perpetual sunshine. For the more formal occasions MAYO'S have silk frocks in a variety of cool shades.

"Eh what! I! So you don't feel this extreme heat at all—may I ask you?" "Oh, it is very simple—for the past six weeks I've taken a course of Acidoflac and Remineraliser; result is I feel full of pep and vitality—eat well, sleep well, and have that 'good to be alive' feeling. Why don't you try Acidoflac?" Most inexpensive. Obtainable at all leading Chemists. Paterson & Co., Sales Agents.

GREAT INTEREST ROUSED IN GREECE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Kiel, Yesterday.
At least 400 foreign and German yachts are expected in Kiel for the Olympic Regatta. Yachts coming from Japan, Argentina, Switzerland and Uruguay are already on the spot practising daily, and practically every day a new flag, announcing the arrival of another nation, is added to those flying over the harbour.

The new Olympic Harbour is complete, and the Olympic Home is filling rapidly with contestants. The city of Kiel is being festively decorated for the great occasion and the Hindenburg Shore is lined with masts for the flags of the participating nations. The Olympic flame will be carried from Berlin to Kiel in the Torch Relay, and will burn during the duration of the Yachting Regatta on an old Hanseatic galleon anchored in the harbour.

A later message stated that at 3.45 p.m. a cyclone or typhoon over the South China Sea was developing. That situated to the north-west of the Pelew Islands was filling up.

COMING WEEK'S TENNIS

Postponed Matches By Rotation

INTERESTING CLASH ON WEDNESDAY

Due to the fact that the fixture list proper for the "A" Division of the Lawn Tennis League has come to a conclusion, all postponed matches will now be played in rotation, unless Clubs make their own arrangements, while the Mixed Doubles, "B", "C" and "D" Divisions will carry on as usual.

One of the most interesting matches scheduled for this week will be seen on Wednesday, when the Recrelo, who lost to the C.R.C. "A" last Friday, entertain the K.C.C. in the "B" Division. Though almost certain of securing the runners-up position, the Recrelo will have to win this match if they are to retain second place — the K.C.C. have dropped three points to date as against the Recrelo's two.

The following is this week's programme:—

Mixed Doubles League (TO-MORROW)

Georges Bonnet, former French Minister of Finance, above, may be sent to the United States to arrange, according to reports, for a billion dollar loan to his country. Paradoxically, this is looked upon as an overture to the settlement of the French debt, for under the Johnson act, the elimination of the debt problem is essential.

WEATHER REPORT

Pressure continues highest over the Pacific to the south-east of Japan. A depression or typhoon has developed in the China Sea about 400 miles south of Hong Kong. It will probably move west-north-west. North-east winds, fresh; cloudy, rain later, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory last evening.

TWO BASEBALL GAMES TO-DAY

Overseas Chinese Have Strenuous Card

JAPANESE AGAIN CHALLENGE

The League Baseball game between the Overseas Chinese and the Volunteers at Causeway Bay to-day should be particularly interesting in view of the fact that both teams have received their coaching from Matty Chang, but in spite of the vast improvement, they still lack experience.

The line-ups of both teams are unchanged, though Abbas may play in some of the innings in place of Wing Lee.

Another interesting factor will be how Bowen's pitching will fare against the Chinese as he has a natural delivery, though with little variety, and is at times very erratic.

Should Hold Volunteers

With Fong catching and either W. Ching or L. Chang pitching, the Chinese should hold the Volunteers to a very low score. Kau will be at short-stop, while the first-base will be entrusted to L. Ching, with B. S. Ching at second.

Following this game the Japanese will meet the Chinese and a splendid encounter should be witnessed.

The Japanese will have Mikuni pitching, but Koga will cover first-base. Yasuda will be catching instead of Takeda this week, and the latter will play at centre field.

Challenging Position

These are the only changes in the Japanese team who, as the result of their good win over the Americans last week, are again in a challenging position for the championship.

The Chinese intend to use the

HAMET HITS ONLY HOME RUN OF MATCH

BOTH PITCHERS USED THROUGHOUT

A home run by Hamet of the Eastern, two splendid catches in the field by Alltree and Mueller and the safe hitting of George were the outstanding features of the League Baseball encounter between Eastern and the Canadians at Causeway Bay, yesterday, when the former won by 7 runs to 2 in a game in which both teams gave a better display of baseball than was expected.

The teams were very evenly matched, Eastern holding an advantage in pitching and fielding, while the Canadians were better at bat. But for several errors on the part of the Canadians in the fourth innings, when they allowed Eastern to score three runs, the game would have been very much closer.

Neither team were troubled by any inferiority complex and gave of their best, the fielding of both sides being the best yet displayed by the teams this season, while the hitting was also good.

M. el Arculli pitched the whole game for Eastern, fanning eight batters and allowing eight hits to be registered. He kept the team together well and did his share at bat.

Lenz, as catcher in place of O. el Arculli, was also safe, but the lack of any pre-arranged signal between him and O. el Arculli resulted in two foul balls being missed near third base.

Hamet came into the limelight by a steady and safe display at first base. He was sure with everything that came his way and his home run to right field was a worthy effort.

Nazarin's Bad Luck

Curreen, at second base, who had plenty of tricks, covered his bag well, keeping the basemen worried at all times and always being a menace at bat. In the absence of Kitchell, Nazarin played at short-stop where he was amazingly quick in picking up grounders and was very safe with flies. He had hard luck when a swift hit touched his glove and the ball rolled towards third to enable the batter to make two bases.

The Canadians should have no qualms at having lost the game. They played well—in fact better than they have done for a long time. Muir, who pitched the whole game, did not worry about striking out the batters, being content to depend on his fielders, and in this respect they gave him every support. He also struck form at bat and registered two good hits.

same line-up as against the Volunteers but much will depend on whether it will be necessary to use H. Chang in the first game.

The following are the probable line-ups:—

Overseas Chinese:—Fong (c), Ching (p), L. Ching (1st b.), B. S. Ching (2nd b.), Kau (s.s.), P. Chang (3rd b.), Chan (l.f.), Moo (c.f.) and C. S. Ching (r.f.).

Volunteers:—Bowen (p), Wing Lee (c), Costa (1st b.), Boltrao (2nd b.), Hussain (3rd b.), D. Leonard (s.s.), N. Leonard (l.f.), Pereira (c.f.) and Sa (r.f.).

Japanese Y.M.A.:—Yasuda (c), Mikuni (p), Takeda (1st b.), Kawamura (2nd b.), Maruyama (3rd b.), Yajima (s.s.), Amasaki (l.f.), Yamasaki (c.f.) and Nakamoto (r.f.).

George's Plucky Effort

Great credit must go to George. Brought in to make up the team, George, who was formerly a regular member of the side but who is suffering from an injured leg, was safe at bat. With Muir running for him, he registered two hits and, as the result of the first, brought Critchley and Goldstein home to draw first blood for the team.

Mueller, at left field, was prominent with two good catches, while Alltree brought off a difficult one at centre field, the dropping of which would have resulted in two more runs being scored by the opposition.

Walker, Smedley and Goldstein were safe in their fielding and batted well, though only Smedley was able to register hits.

Pearce, at first base, made a serious error when returning a ball to Muir, the lapse enabling Nazarin to get home and Ismail to advance a base. This had a unsettling effect on the team for a while, but fortunately the Canadians regained their composure and continued in the manner they had started.

THREE-POWER TALK IN LONDON

PRELIMINARY TO BIG CONFERENCE

ITALIAN COMMENT UNFAVOURABLE

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

It is now officially confirmed that a three-Power conference will take place in London on July 22 and 23. French official quarters express gratification at the British Government's consent to the conference, since they had feared that a complete cancellation of the conference of the Locarno Powers after Italy's refusal to attend following the conclusion of the Austro-German agreement might cause the world to believe that the Western Powers were disunited.

The fact that the conference will be held in London and not in Brussels, as originally planned, has by no means diminished the importance of the meeting, declare political quarters here, which assert that the Prime Ministers as well as the Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and Belgium will attend the London conference. The three Governments, so it is stated, agreed to hold the conference to show their solidarity and their will to co-operate in the peaceful reconstruction of Europe, and will therefore prepare in London a programme for a larger meeting, which may possibly assume the character of a general European conference.

It is not expected, however, that binding decisions regarding the common policy to be pursued by Britain, France and Belgium will be reached at the London conference, since such a three-Power pact would seriously hinder negotiations with the other Powers, particularly Germany and Italy. The London conference will therefore be restricted more or less to discussion of the current international political situation.

WIFE DIED OF NEGLECT

Coroner Criticises Husband

SERIOUS CHARGE POSSIBLE

The husband of a woman who, it was stated, died from self-neglect, was criticised by the coroner, Mr. A. Douglas, Cowburn, at a Camberwell inquest last month.

"I am not sure," the coroner said, "whether you have not brought yourself within a measurable distance of the law on a serious charge. Your whole flat was filthy to an extreme."

The enquiry concerned Edith Frances Jenner, aged 61, wife of a painter and decorator, of Darrell-road, East Dulwich.

Flat Filthy

Albert Jenner, the husband, said his wife had not been outside the flat for about four years. She had trouble with her legs, but refused to see a doctor. When he awoke on June 13 he found her lying dead in bed beside him.

A sanitary inspector said: "I have not seen a worse flat from the point of view of vermin."

Dr. Harry Audley Lucas, pathologist, said that the woman died from inanition and self-neglect. He thought she must have been weak-minded.

The coroner recorded a verdict of death from long-continued self-neglect.

CHUNG SHING AND CHINESE "Y" TIE EAST LANCS. BEATEN AT WATER-POLO

THE intermittent rain which fell last night spoiled the inter-club swimming meeting between the Chinese Young Men's Association and the Chung Shing Benevolent Association which resulted in a tie of 10 points each at the latter's bathing pavilion at Kennedy Town last night.

Included in the programme was an exhibition of diving and a relay race for the "B" swimmers of the two clubs, the latter event being won by the Chinese Y.M.C.A.

In a friendly water-polo game Chung Shing beat a team from the East Lanes. by four clear goals. The Chinese, with the inclusion of Chan Shek-pui, Wong Suen-man and So Ting-mo, proved much the better team, though the soldiers gave a good display. Thorpe, at centre-half, Grabban and Butterworth being outstanding. The Chinese scored in the first half through So Ting-mo and increased their lead through Chan Shek-pui soon after the interval. Further goals were scored by these two players.

WATER MAIN BURSTS

Kingsway Tram Tunnel Flooded

NARROW ESCAPE OF ELECTRICIANS

Thousands of gallons of water, which escaped when a water main burst in Theobald's-road, Bloomsbury, last month, ran into shops and offices, drenched pedestrians, stopped the traffic, and flooded Kingsway tram tunnel, dislocating the tramway service.

Paving stones were thrown into the air when the burst occurred, and the water, which surged along the full breadth of Theobald's-road, was in places more than 18in. deep.

The street had to be closed to traffic.

After 40 minutes the water subsided, leaving a hole in the pavement and roadway about four yards across, eight yards long and from two to three yards deep.

Two men who were working on the electric mains not far away had a narrow escape from death or serious injury. They were in a hole in the pavement and were about to cut the main to make a connection. Had they done so the water would have caused a short circuit.

Barricaded Door

In shops and cafes nearby customers jumped on to counters to avoid getting wet.

Women in a flower shop barricaded the front door to keep the water out, and telephoned the fire brigade and Council.

An official of the Metropolitan Water Board said that the burst occurred in a 24-inch main. The supply to houses in the area was affected for a short time.

The main was closed and repairs were begun immediately.

When the water had subsided, the centre power-line of the tram track was jammed with pieces of stone and brick.

Until this was done trams were turned back at the Embankment and at the northern end of Theobald's-road.

"AIR-CYCLING" FOR ALL" ENVISAGED

STARTLING SUCCESS OF AMATEUR GLIDER

EXPERIMENTS STILL PROCEEDING

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Weimar, Yesterday.

A new record in flying by the use of human muscular strength as the motive power has just been achieved by Herr Hofmann, who experimented with Herren Haesler and Villinger, two mechanics who startled the world about a year ago with the announcement of their having made a machine which had achieved flights up to 235 metres. Herr Hofmann, using the same principle but an improved machine, has now flown 380 metres with no other motive power than his own muscles.

As the whole principle of muscular flight ultimately depends on devising a machine that can be "cycled" high enough into the air to reach the zone where the air currents are strong enough to permit gliding and the use of thermal differences, it is of vital importance that the machine and pilot should be as light as possible, since these have both to be lifted by sheer muscular power.

Herr Haesler and Villinger looked for a strong, muscular pilot lightly built, and ultimately found Herr Hofmann, who is an amateur motor-racer and at the time was out of work. As Herr Hofmann seemed by build and disposition the ideal man for the purpose, Herr Haesler had him taught gliding till he qualified as a pilot.

For some months the trio have been experimenting quietly and have great hopes of so increasing the efficiency of their machine that it will be able to rise to the right aerodynamic zone and make "air-cycling for all" an accomplished fact.—Trans-Ocean Service.

DAVIS CUP

"Australia, on paper the appointed winners of the European Zone, went down to Germany last year in Berlin by 4 matches to 1. The conclusiveness of the result, while confirming Germany's steady advance towards the highest honours in recent years, created a world-wide surprise," stated A. Wallis Myers, the London Daily Telegraph tennis correspondent.

That Australia would fail to win a singles match was inconceivable before the contest began, and while experts might have given von Cramm two singles victories, Henkel's two wins over Vivian McGrath and Jack Crawford were sensations and had never been visualised.

The following were the results of last year's clash in the Third Round:—

SINGLES.—J. von Cramm (Germany) beat J. H. Crawford (Australia) 6-3, 7-5, 6-2, beat Y. M. McGrath (Australia) 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, 4-6.
—H. Henkel (Germany) beat V. M. McGrath (Australia) 4-6, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2, beat J. H. Crawford (Australia) 2-6, 6-3, 8-7, 4-6, 6-4.

CONGRATULATIONS to every man and woman

whose teeth are still perfect whose hair is still healthy whose nerves are still steady
whose vitality is still buoyant

They've escaped the most common complaint of civilised people—a shortage of minerals in the body. Teeth were meant to last a lifetime, hair to retain its colour and luxuriance, and the heart and nervous system should give carefree service for 'three-score years and ten'.

But teeth, hair, nerves and muscles depend for well-being on the millions of cells of which the body is made up. These cells must have plenty of minerals to keep them strong; any shortage weakens them and you soon feel the effect in every organ of your body. Kalzania supplies the body with all the minerals it requires, in an easily absorbed form. Therefore, the effects of Kalzania are quickly felt in increased vitality, better appetite, soothed nerves. Soon the whole system is toned up. The teeth regain strength and hardness and decay is arrested. Radiant health returns—to stay. Start taking Kalzania without delay—give it to your children too.

"I am never without Kalzania, not taking them always, but at any time of extra strain, and when there are infections about. I find my resistance to disease and my general health marvellous."

Marriage Customs Of The Various Miao Tribes

PICTURESQUE RELICS FROM OTHER DAYS

(By PHYLLIS JUBY)

IN South and South-West China, together under the pressure of there live, still to-day, many tribes of an aboriginal race which spread through South-East Asia before the arrival of the Chinese. In all they might number about 10,000,000 people, divided into smaller or larger tribes—the most important of which are called the Miao, Lolo, Mo-so, Chung-chia—living in the isolated, wild and impassable mountain areas of northern Kwangtung, Kuei-chow, Kuang-hsi, Yunnan and Szechuan. As yet there is no reliable theory as to where these people originally came from, but one thing is sure: they lived in the territory we know as China to-day before the Chinese occupied it. But during the last 2,000 years the Chinese have forced them to the mountainous regions of the South, and even in those retreats their position has become untenable. Although they possess a remarkable culture of their own, they have absorbed much that is Chinese, and they cannot long withstand the strength of the much higher Chinese civilisation. Gradually they will be assimilated and absorbed by the Chinese and entirely disappear. It is interesting, therefore, to note some of their customs and habits.

The little we know of these tribes we learn mainly through the missionaries, notably A. Jamieson. Marcel Granet writes something about them in his "Festivals and Songs of Ancient China," and an interesting article by Dr. Gustav Fochler-Hauke appeared a short while ago in the German periodical Sinica.

Matriarchal Conditions

In most of the tribes matriarchal conditions are dominating, though certain Chinese patriarchal customs have been accepted. Agriculture is mainly done by the women, while the men devote their time to hunting, fishing and fighting. They became acquainted with money through the Chinese, but they still regard it with misgivings, preferring barter. Their habitations, small and poor villages or isolated huts, are in the wildest parts of the country, far from the Chinese settlements, and often it is only possible to reach them with the greatest difficulty. Their huts are sometimes built of stone or wood, occasionally of bricks, but more often of straw, reeds or twigs. Water buffaloes and chickens are the preferred domestic animals. Only once a week or on certain market-days do they descend to the Chinese villages to exchange their meagre products for industrial goods.

Many of these Miao tribes have preserved their independence, living in hostility with the Chinese. Others have been subdued and enjoy only a certain autonomous administration under the rule of a chief who is responsible to the Chinese authorities. This autonomy is not too great a boon for some tribes, as most of the chiefs are degenerate. The Chinese, in writing the names of these tribes, put the radical "dog" or "animal" before the phonetic character, partly from contempt, partly indicating their totemistic origin.

Wide Divergences

These tribes, who at one time lived at great distances from each other and were only brought closer together under the pressure of Chinese invasion, naturally diverge widely in language, customs and morals. Often they live in hostility and always they avoid intermarriage between the tribes. On the other hand, intermarriage between the tribe women and Chinese merchants, officials and peasants is common. The beautiful embroidered costumes which formerly were worn by both sexes are now seen only on women, and often even they do not wear them. The names of some of the tribes originated from the design or colour of their costumes, as: Black—, Multicolour—, or Flowery-Miao.

Remarkable are the betrothal and marriage customs of the tribes. For many hundred years and girls embroider their betrothal dress and the bag-like shawls in which later they will carry babies. The ornaments of the brides and women—bracelets, rings, necklaces, and quaint head-dresses—are rich. Some brides wear silver jewels weighing several pounds. These jewels serve not only as ornaments, but also as the family fortune. Robbers are by no means scarce; but they practically never attack and rob women of these jewels: they seem to be taboo.

Courtship Customs

The courtship of the marriageable young people in the tribe of the Black-Miao is carried on at the simple village square, a square covered with stamped clay or grass. Matriarchal conditions are characterised by the great external freedom enjoyed by the women of those tribes in comparison with the patriarchal Chinese. On certain days the boys and girls gather on the village square, the girls bejewelled, ready to make their choice. The boys bring their lou-sen, a sweet-tone wooden blowing instrument, often several feet long. Holding hands and standing face to face in two rows, the boys and girls dance to the sound of the lou-sen and the small drum.

Each side challenges the other, and the couples which have paired off proceed to respond to each other in improvised songs. They show an amazing talent and give proof of a romantic imaginative force. Usually they start off with the tale of creation, and in flowery language they tell what an immense time has been necessary to create such beautiful and richly endowed girls. The girls show no less ability in humorous and quick-witted answers; often, indeed, they show themselves to be superior. Sometimes there are lively battles between the rivals, but these emotional storms find their outlet—at least on the village square—only in songs of love or anger. The meetings last many days, until the young people know each other better and the girls have made their choice. The girls understand how to encourage their favourites singing such songs.

A lover brave and true, whose skill is able to win the girl's favour. . . . And, too, they know how to repulse the unwanted competitor:

The poorest devil who ever came To carry away a girl's contempt. Parents have no say in the matter.

When a girl has made her choice and informed her brother, the bridegroom brings presents—ornaments or chickens—there is a feast, and with that the marriage ceremony is over.

ments or chickens—there is a feast, and with that the marriage ceremony is over.

Other Customs

Among the Miao of Kuang-hsi the young men and women assemble in a narrow valley, the men on one side and the women on the other. They sing, and when a boy has pleased a girl by his singing she throws him a coloured ball. The girls of the Chung-chia tribe in South Kuei-chow and Yunnan also choose their mate with the ball of coloured silk. The boys gather in a circle around the girls who throw the ball and marry the boy who catches it. Naturally the girl throws the ball so that the boy of her choice catches it. And then follows a contest in eloquence and poetry.

After the choice, the day of the wedding is set by the mother of the bride and the guests are invited. The wedding feast lasts several days and is spent in games and song. Shortly before the end of the feast the bride disappears and her husband must find her to take her to his house. Sometimes this is no easy matter as the bride hides with friends or relatives and escapes each time the husband finds her. If he does not succeed in finding his bride, she returns to him voluntarily only after a year has passed.

The young men and women of the Lolo tribe form lines facing one another and cut fern to the accompaniment of improvised songs. In some tribes there is a rule that the boys must not belong to the same village as the girls. This, it is believed, is a survival of early exogamy. Their songs are the rule for granted.

(Boy) . . . What is your country, fair lady?

Where do you dwell, fair lady? I think now of you;

I have never seen you before. (Girl) . . . You speak brightly, You express yourself fairly.

If you would be my husband Come, let me consider you.

Marriage Assemblies

The young people of the Tu jen tribe of Kuang-hsi assemble each year from different villages, over 1,000 coming to each gathering. These ceremonies are held for the purpose of settling the preliminaries of marriage. The couples who are mutually attracted ramble in the neighbouring thickets and in the undergrowth of the jungle, there to exchange pledges of future marriage. And the natives believe that if these assemblies were hindered or prohibited, for any reason, the harvests would fall to ripen and the people would be punished by many epidemics.

The married women of the Crow-coloured Miao in Middle Kuei-chow wear little pointed baskets on their heads over which they comb their hair, and with small sticks and ribbons create a fantastic decoration. Formerly the girls in this tribe were not allowed to marry before the age of 30. The girls choose their husbands here too, but the festivities are more defined. After the wedding feast the young woman returns to the house of her parents, and on a particularly lucky day she goes to her husband's house, accompanied by friends who carry presents.

The Sway-ai-Miaos in Kuei-chow slaughter a cow for the wedding feast, but partake only of the soup, while part of the meat is offered to the spirits and the rest is distributed among the guests. Before the feast the bride goes round the circle formed by the guests and washes their feet. In turn the guests give presents, but should there be one among them not generous enough, the bride blackens his face and feet and he is not allowed to clean them until he has presented a fit offering.

CLEVER COUPS IN BRIDGE

By Lt.-Col. Walter Buller, C.B.E.
TO establish a trick for the opposition in order to prevent the opposition from making it, appears to be a waste of time. Actually this is a major operation, and was originally invented by an Austrian player in the old days of Short Whist and known as "The Vienna Coup."

During my match against the Irish Free State a hand occurred which gave me a chance of "working" the coup. My partner, Graham Mathieson, dealt the following hand in the Y position:

S. A K 9 2
H. Q J 10
D. A K 10 2
C. 9 3

Mathieson opened with a bid of "Two Diamonds," Z responding with "Four Hearts." Mathieson now called "Six Hearts," and Z made it "Seven Hearts."

A led the queen of clubs. How should the hand be played?

There are 12 certain tricks visible, and the 13th can be made by finessing the knave of diamonds, but only if A holds the queen.

After drawing the adverse trumps, the declarer led the knave of diamonds, in the hope that A held the queen and would cover. The ace was played from dummy.

At this stage a trick was established for B because the king of diamonds was continued from Y's hand, followed by the ace of spades.

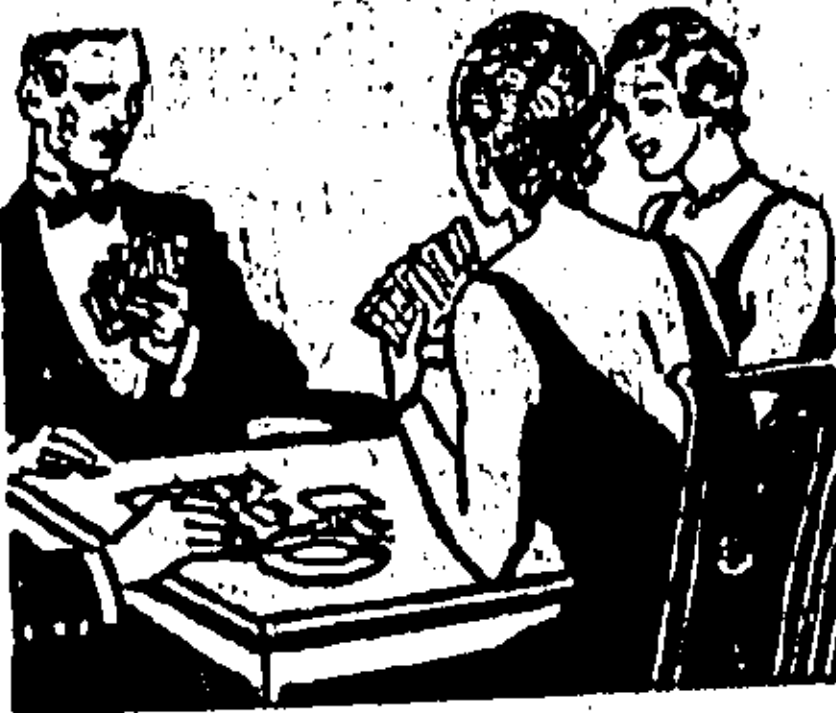

The declarer got back with the winning club and played out the remaining trumps, on the last of which the position was as follows:

S. K 9
H. 10
D. 10
C. Y S. Q J
H. A B H. J
D. A Z D. Q
C. J C.

Z led the last trump, discarding dummy's 10 of diamonds. B was thus forced to discard either the trick which had been established for him (the queen of diamonds) or a spade. In either event the grand slam is made.

The Vienna Coup can be employed to advantage in the making of a part score.

In the following hand, Z had made a bluff One No trumps bid on very little more than a useful diamond suit. The opposition had taken the first five tricks, but the declarer had won the sixth trick. The position was as under:—

S. 5
H. 4 3
D. A 5 4 2
C. Y S. —
H. A B H. —
D. 6 5 Z D. J 10 9 8
C. K 7 6 C. J 10 9

Z can afford to lose one trick, but only one. He must play his winning heart, discarding a club from dummy. Now the winning diamonds are played, a second club being thrown from dummy.

The declarer continues with a fourth diamond, and A must either discard the winning spade or bare his King of clubs. It is immaterial which he does.

There are many variations of the Vienna Coup, one of the prettiest being the following, taken from "Kempson on Contract."

S. 10 4
H. A Q 4 2
D. A 7 6 4
C. 9 7 5

Y and Z were vulnerable, and Z was the dealer. Z called "Two Clubs," A "Two Spades," Y "Three Hearts," B "No bid." The auction continued until Z reached Seven Clubs, the opening lead being the queen of spades.

The declarer can take 12 tricks provided the adverse hearts are evenly divided. After winning the first trick, Z plays out five rounds of trumps in the hope that the enemy will discard hearts. Y discards two diamonds, and B throws two spades, one heart and one diamond.

Dummy's ace of hearts is made, but A discards on Z's king of hearts, thus exposing the position. How should the declarer continue?

If B holds the king of diamonds, the coup can be "worked" by making dummy's ace of diamonds, and then returning to the declarer's hand with the master spade. The last trump is played, leaving Z with the queen of diamonds and one heart. Dummy holds Q, 4 of hearts, and B must either discard his king of diamonds or unguard his knave of hearts.

The declarer "placed" A with the King of diamonds, but there was no certainty that this player held the diamond knave. At trick held the diamond knave. At trick (Continued at foot of next Col.)

EARL'S COURT NOISE

Early Trial Of Action

DEMOLITION CAUSES NUISANCE

The motion in the action brought by residents and property-owners in the neighbourhood of Earl's Court exhibition grounds, complaining of noise and vibration in connection with demolition work, was again before Mr. Justice Crossman in the Chancery Division last month.

They complained that the nuisance, particularly from a big American concrete-mixer, was unbearable.

On May 26 various undertakings were given by the contractors concerned. Sir William Jowitt, K.C., who appeared for the property-owners and residents, now complained that some of the undertakings had not been fully complied with. He did not suggest that this was deliberate.

After a discussion, undertakings given at the previous hearing were continued.

Undertakings

These were that Hegeman-Harris and their sub-contractors, except in the case of emergency, would not disturb the neighbourhood between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m., or the drills, stamping machines, cranes or lorries between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m.

An undertaking by Mr. Walter Monckton, K.C., for Sir Robert McAlpine and Sons, contractors, not to use a large concrete-mixer or large drill at 7 p.m. and not use the cranes after 10 p.m., except on Saturday, was complained of by Sir William Jowitt. Counsel agreed to confer and try to reach an adjustment.

Sir William Jowitt said that he hoped there would be a speedy trial of the action, adding: "When this case comes on I am going to ask for an injunction in very much stronger terms than the undertakings, not only regarding night-work but day-work as well."

Counsel discussed arrangements for a trial before the Long Vacation, and Mr. Justice Crossman said he hoped it would be possible for the hearing to take place on July 15.

YOUNG MAN TO BE TRIED

"Mr. A" Tells Of Car
Drive Threats

MONEY DEMANDED

A young man stated to be in business in Surrey, who was referred to as "Mr. A," gave evidence at Woking last month when Daniel O'Sullivan, aged 33, labourer, of Chobham, was committed for trial on charges of demanding with menaces sums of £5 and £25 with intent to steal.

Mr. G. D. Roberts, prosecuting, said that O'Sullivan had made a long statement accusing Mr. "A" of immoral conduct, and adding, "I told him I wanted some money."

In the witness-box Mr. "A" said he saw O'Sullivan standing on the kerb at Knaphill on June 2, and stopped to ask if he knew of a chauffeur out of employment.

Went For Drive

They went for a drive, and during it left the car to walk across the common. On their return O'Sullivan made accusations and asked for £5.

Mr. "A" said the threat unnerved and frightened him, so he obtained the £5 from a friend. Later, when O'Sullivan asked for more, he communicated with the police, and on their instructions met O'Sullivan at Chobham. He handed over £25.

Inspector A. King produced a long statement, in which O'Sullivan said Mr. "A" after the car drive, persisted in offering him money.

9. Z led the Queen of diamonds. A covered with the King, and dummy won. This established the knave of diamonds for B.

Trick 10 was won by Z with the King of spades, and trick 11 was won with Z's last trump. Z thus operated a Vienna Coup against B by the clever method of transferring the winning diamond from A's hand to B's hand.

TURKISH TROOPS TO MARCH INTO BOSPHORUS

AMARNATH TO REMAIN IN INDIA

Definitely Not Going Back To England
BIG LOSS TO TOURISTS
Bombay, Yesterday.

Amarnath is definitely not returning to England.

The decision that Amarnath will not return to England followed the intimation received by the Indian Board of Control from his captain and manager that his return was not desirable.—Reuter.

Major Ricketts, manager of the All-India cricket team now in England, in a statement made earlier in the week, said that the Maharajkumar of Vizianagram, captain of the team, is completely willing to accede to the Indian Board of Control's request to take back Amarnath, now that the effect of his necessary disciplinary action had been felt.

A later message from Bombay was to the effect that the Nawab of Bhopal, in a statement, said that the announcement that Amarnath would return to England immediately was wholly unauthorised and premature.

An earlier report from New Delhi stated that the Nawab of Bhopal, President of the India Cricket Board had sent a personal but firm request to the captain and manager of the Indian cricket team touring England, that they should recall Amarnath, and ask him to come back to England as soon as possible so as to be in time for the second Test at Manchester next Saturday.

BARE DETAILS

Amarnath was sent back to India as a "disciplinary measure" and at the time no explanation was given beyond the fact that both the captain and manager of the team had had occasion to speak to Amarnath "about his behaviour on and off the field."

Amarnath was alleged to have been insolent to his captain and to have made the statement that they could do nothing about it as he was indispensable to the side.

FINE STROKE PLAYER

Amarnath was the best all-rounder of the side. He was one of their most brilliant stroke players, and his bowling often proved very valuable.

He made centuries in each innings in the match with Essex at Brentwood at the end of May, and his figures for the season to date are:

Batting: 20 innings, 1 not out, 613 runs, 130 highest score, 32.26 average.
Bowling: 267.3 overs, 71 maidens, 668 runs, 32 wickets, 20.87 average.

Last winter he made a century against the Australians during their tour of India.

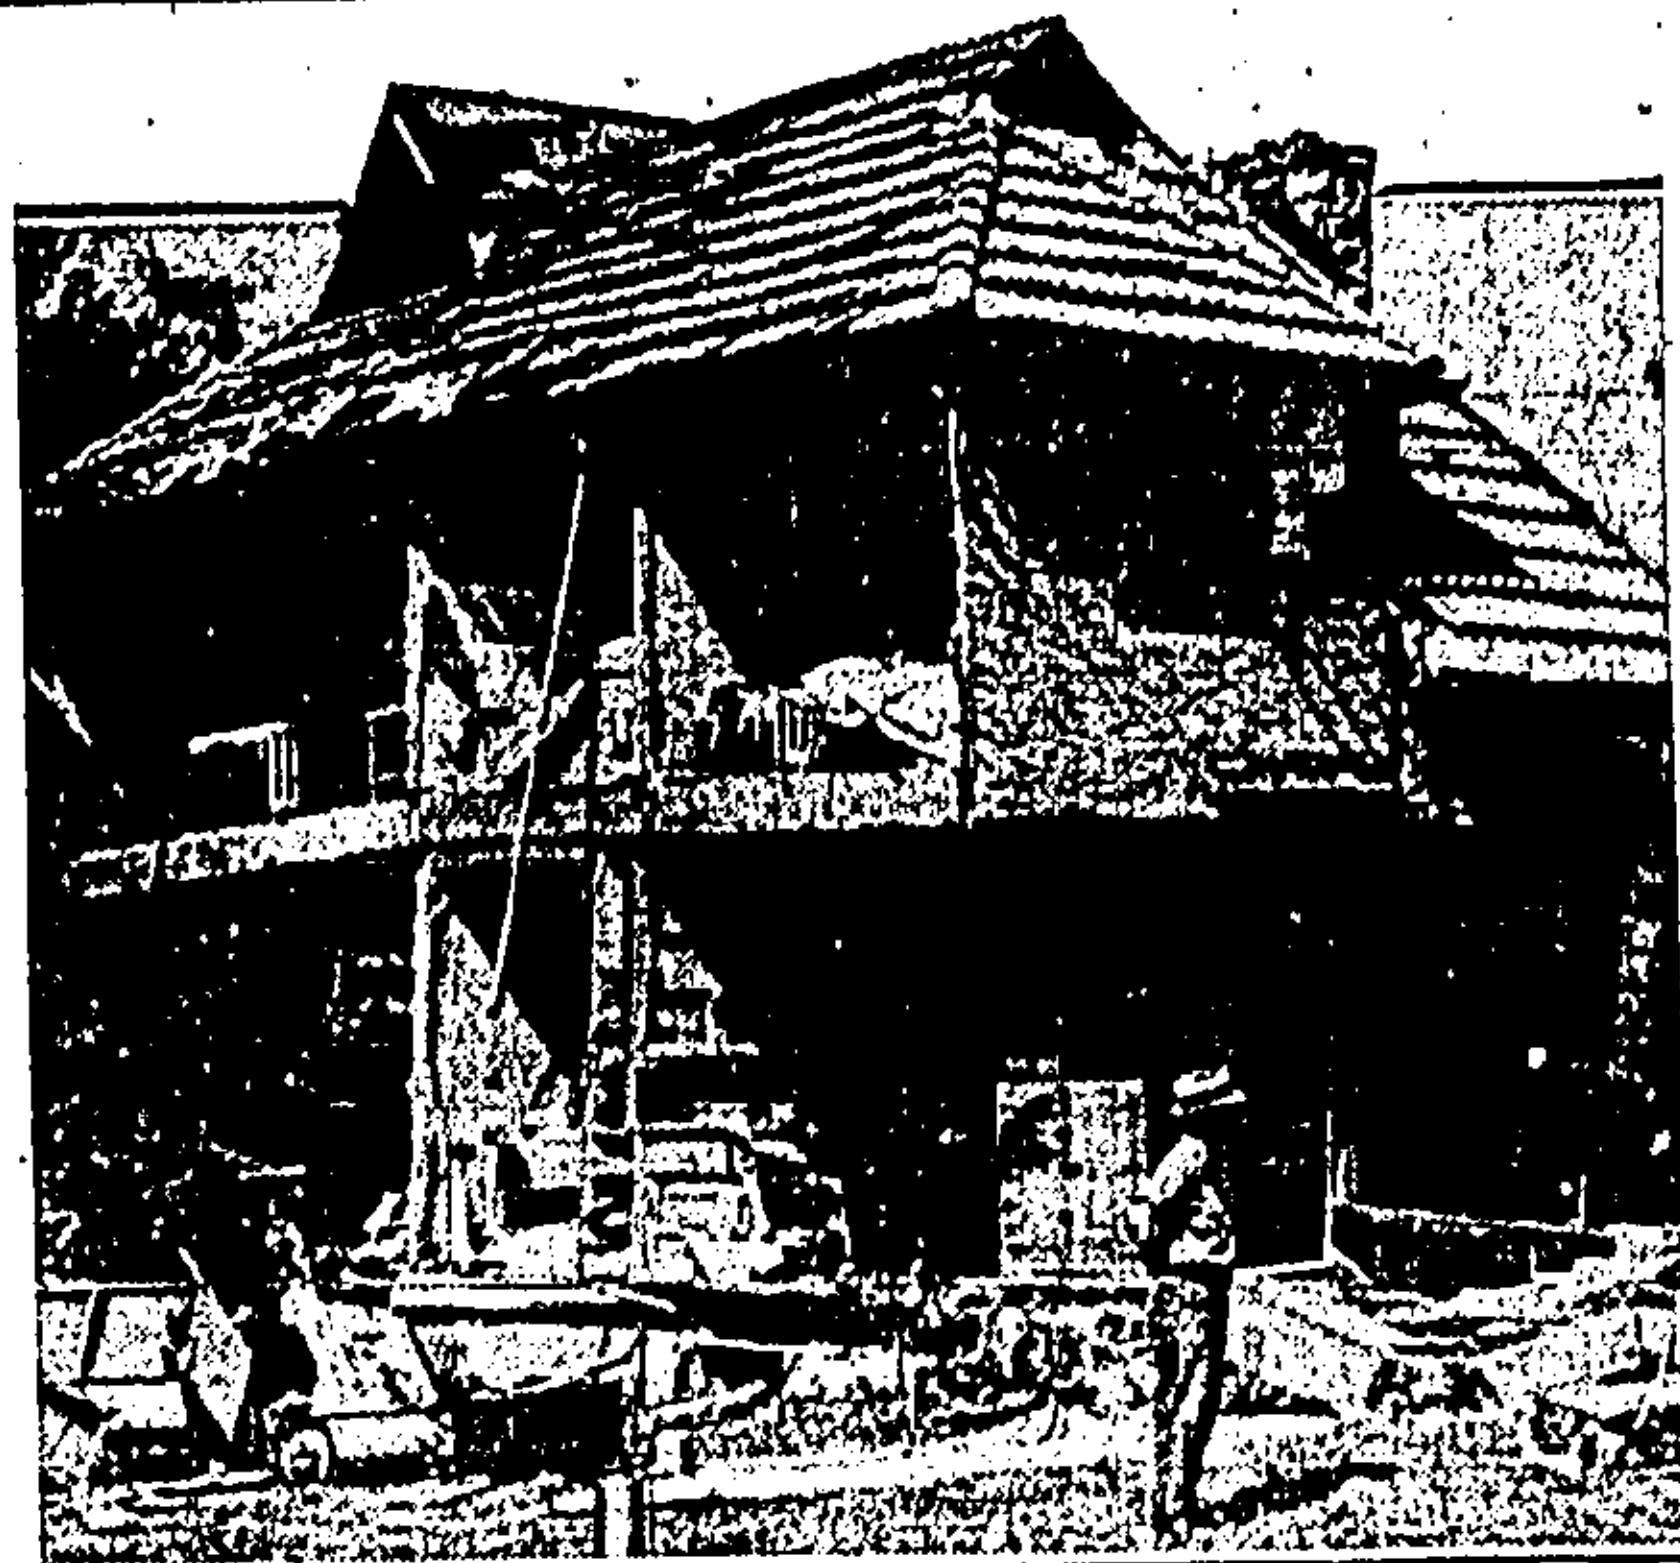

He has the distinction of being the only Indian who has made a century against England in a Test match.

This he made against D. R. Jardine's team at Bombay in 1933.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH CRICKET MATCHES.

London, Yesterday.—Due to rain no play was possible in the following county cricket matches: Birmingham.—Warwick v Sussex.

Worcester.—Worcester v Leicestershire.
Ponypriid.—Glamorgan v Essex.

Struck by two successive bolts of lightning within the space of a minute last month, this Saksen farmhouse at Harrison, New Jersey, stands incontrovertible witness to the fallacy of the old belief that lightning never strikes twice in the same place. Julius Saksen, the owner, was killed.

SEVERE MEASURES IN DANZIG

To Safeguard Public Safety
And Order

Berlin, Yesterday.
Severe measures restricting individual freedom have been introduced in Danzig by the President of the Senate, Dr. Gretscher, on the ground of the necessity of safeguarding the public safety and order.—Reuter.

HINDENBURG'S FLIGHT

British Territory
Avoided

Frankfort, Yesterday.

The commander of the airship Hindenburg stated that when he reached the coast of Northern Ireland yesterday morning on his return from Lakehurst, the German Government ordered him not to fly over British territory. This is apparently a sequel to the questions asked in the House of Commons on July 8 about the airship's flights over strategic points.—Reuter.

GERMAN PLANE AT KAI TAK

They left Bangkok yesterday morning for Hong Kong, touching at Hanoi, where they refuelled.

UNEVENTFUL TRIP

Captain Lutz said that, with the exception of the unfortunate accident at Rhodes, they had been extremely lucky on the trip and had missed any stormy weather over India, which was rather unusual, as it was now the rainy season there.

The plane was sighted over the Peak shortly before 5.30 p.m. yesterday, but owing to the strong gusts of wind which were blowing from the north-east, Capt. Lutz decided to circle the aerodrome first in order to judge a correct landing, which he very successfully accomplished.

Among the large gathering to greet the airmen were Herr H. Glipperich, Consul-General for Germany, and Frau Glipperich, Mr. Moss, the Civil Superintendent of Gulf of Tonking.

POLITICS IN FRANCE

Premier Appeals To Nation

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE BILL
BEFORE SENATE

Paris, Yesterday.

The Premier, M. Leon Blum, today broadcasted an appeal to the nation to buy the Baby Bonds issued by the Government, which are unlimited and redeemable at short notice. M. Blum added: "You have elected the present Socialist Government. It is up to you to give the Government the means to carry out its tasks." The Government's idea in issuing the bonds of small denomination was to make use of the hoardings in France, estimated at $300,000,000. A bill for the extension of suffrage to women has been placed before the Senate for discussion. Since the Great War a similar bill has been passed by the Chamber of Deputies four times, but has been rejected by the Senate. There is hope, however, that the fifth occasion may meet with success.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

FULL SAIL WINS NATIONAL BREEDERS' STAKES

London, Yesterday.—Full Sail, at 20 to 1, won the National Breeders' Stakes to-day from Foray, at 9 to 4, by 1½ lengths, while one length separated the latter from Goya the Second, at 10 to 1, which came third. There were 17 starters.—Reuter.

the Aerodrome, and a large gathering from the German community.

DEUTSCHER KLUB FUNCTION

The airmen stayed at the Peninsula Hotel last night and yesterday evening were the guests of the Deutscher Klub at a purely informal gathering.

Captain Lutz intended leaving Kai Tak at 7 a.m. to-day, flying direct to Shanghai. Unfortunately for him and his crew, a typhoon warning was received by Kai Tak at 5.07 p.m. yesterday, which stated that a disturbance was situated south-east of the Macleod field Bank, moving west-north-west. Should the disturbance curve northwards, it is presumed that it will prevent Capt. Lutz from leaving the Colony this morning. On its present course, the disturbance should enter the coast north of Tourane, in the

OCCUPATION OF THE DARDANELLES MILITARY ZONE TO BE CREATED

INACCESSIBLE TO FOREIGNERS

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Istanbul, Yesterday.

Turkish troops will march into the Dardanelles Straits zone and the Bosphorus on Monday evening immediately after the signature of the new agreement in Montreux, according to the present programme. Preparations for the marching in of the troops, which will consist of representatives of all categories and will be supported by the fleet, were made some considerable time ago.

The chief objective will be the towns of Canakale and Gallipoli. After the occupation a beginning will be made at once with the erection of fortifications. A 19-kilometre wide strip of territory along the whole Dardanelles coast will be declared a military zone henceforth, and will therefore not be accessible to foreigners. Only Turks will be permitted to live there, while Jews and Greeks will be forbidden to settle. The legislative basis for the regulation of the settlement in this zone has been in readiness for the past year.

Great preparations are being made throughout the whole country to celebrate the restoration of full Turkish sovereignty. The American financier Ricketts, whose name was in such prominence at the outbreak of the Abyssinian conflict, arrived here two days ago and announced his intention of proceeding to Ankara to obtain the contracts for the erection of buildings and the construction of fortifications in the militarised zone.—Trans-Ocean Service.

TRADE AGREEMENT PROLONGED

Germany And French

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

The most-favoured nation agreement between Germany and the French mandated territories, which has already been prolonged several times and expires on July 20, has by mutual consent been renewed until October 20 for Togo and the Cameroons, and until September 1 for Syria and Lebanon.—Trans-Ocean Service.

POISON-GAS IN WARFARE

Degrading And Inhuman

STRONG RESOLUTION AT
B. M. A. MEETING

London, Yesterday.

The British Medical Association meeting at Oxford has passed a resolution on poison-gas, which condemned unreservedly its use in warfare as inhuman in its results and degrading to civilisation, and calls upon the Council of the Association "to do everything in its power with a view to securing the co-operation of the medical profession in all countries in order to prohibit the use of poison-gas."—British Wireless Service.
